

MELLON INCREASES INCOME TAX CREDIT PLAN TO 15 PER CENT

Estimates $300,000,000 Surplus for Fiscal Year Now.

WILL NOT BE SORRY IF PROGRAM FAILS

Reiterates No Permanent Cut in Schedules Will Be Sanctioned.

(By Associated Press.) Secretary Mellon yesterday again boosted the ante on the plan of President Coolidge for income tax credit, declaring it would be safe to permit taxpayers a saving of at least 15 per cent on their next year's income taxes.

The 15 per cent minimum credit was dedicated, Mr. Mellon explained, on a prospective surplus of $300,000,000 for this fiscal year. First estimates made by the President indicated a surplus of $200,000,000, and on that ground he proposed a 10 per cent credit, which later was boosted to 12 1/2 per cent.

There were definite indications yesterday at the Treasury, however, that no tears would be shed there if Congress turned down the proposed credit plan, threats against which have been seen in some of the conflicting views expressed by leaders, and forced the application of this year's surplus to debt retirement.

But if the surplus is going to be returned to the taxpayers, Secretary Mellon made it clear yesterday that he saw no other practical way to do it. He also reiterated that no permanent cut in tax rates would be sanctioned at this time.

At a round-table discussion of taxes with newspaper men, Mr. Mellon frankly called for alternative proposals to the plan to give a credit on next year's income taxes as a means of returning to the taxpayers the prospective surplus.

Suggest Excise Credit. Some suggested that the credit be given on the excise and corporation taxes alone; others that the surplus be divided in greater proportion among the individual income tax payers so that those who pay small levies get greater credit, and some proposed that the entire surplus be applied to retirement of the debt.

Mr. Mellon replied that he didn't feel it would be fair to take the surplus created largely by income tax payers and apply it on reduction of the excise taxes, including the automobile and admission dues. It would be difficult also, he said, to give the smaller taxpayers greater credit because their payments now were so small. This plan, he added, also would be prejudicial to the other taxpayers.

The Secretary did not deny, however, that he would just as soon use the surplus toward retirement of the public debt, but added that the debt, which now stands at about $16,000,000,000, would be cut by well over $500,000,000 this year and he considered this sufficient.

With a surplus of more than $300,000,000 in sight for this year and business conditions continuing sound, the suggestion was offered that it would be safe to make a permanent reduction in taxes. But Mr. Mellon replied that it was unwise to count on certain continuance of prosperity, declaring if there was any diminution it would wipe out the surplus and might necessitate a consequent increase in tax rates.

MAHARAJAH OF INDORE REPORTED VISITING U. S.

Ruler Figured in Scandal in Which Friend of Dancing Girl Was Slain.

SAID TO BE IN SALT LAKE

Salt Lake City, Utah, Nov. 15 (By A. P.).—Another royal visitor to America bobbed up here today. The spokesman for the visitor, whose retinue of servants at least was in the royal class, announced that America was undergoing the inspection of the Maharajah of Indore, Central India.

The reputed royal personage was registered at a hotel as "T. Raju." The spokesman said he was William Ewert, representing a national travel bureau. Ewert said the identity of the Indian prince had been preserved since his arrival in New York three weeks ago. In the party are Mrs. N. Miller, and her daughter registered as "Miss N. Miller," of Seattle.

The trip has included Niagara Falls, Detroit, Chicago and Colorado Springs. The party will go to San Francisco and Los Angeles, returning East by way of the grand canyon. Following upon his abdication of the throne in favor of his eldest son last February, the Maharajah of Indore was reported to have gone into exile in Europe. His abdication followed a scandal involving the murder of a merchant friend of his favorite dancer, Mumtaz Begum, who had fled his home, and the mutilation of the latter.

The affair caused a great stir and seven officials connected with the Indore government were arrested. Three were sentenced to death and the other four deported.

WOMAN, OVERCOME, DIES AFTER 2 WEEKS

Husband Was Released After Delay in Sending Wife to Hospital.

Mrs. Sylvia Torman, 38 years old, of 918 Nineteenth street northwest, died yesterday in Freedman's hospital nearly two weeks after her husband, William Torman, reported to police he found her in the basement of their home overcome by illuminating gas.

Torman said he found his wife unconscious with several gas jets turned on, November 3. He revived her but did not send her to the hospital until later in the day.

The attention directed to the case because of the delay in having Mrs. Torman taken to a hospital, police arrested Torman November 4, and released him the next day. An inquest will be held probably tomorrow.

MRS. HALL AND KIN NEAR DEATH SCENE. WITNESS IS QUOTED

State Raises the Issue of Veracity Against E. K. Soper.

LETTERS FROM SLAIN WOMAN INTRODUCED

Scratch on Widow's Face Described, but Defense Scouts Testimony.

Somerville, N. J., Nov. 15 (By A. P.). An issue of veracity between two State witnesses, appearing out of a clear sky in the Hall-Mills case to day, preempted for a time the place in the spotlight occupied by the love affairs of the Rev. Edward W. Hall and Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills, slain with him four years ago.

Between testimony of a sister of Mrs. Mills, that the slain choir singer was not ashamed of her love for the rector of the New Brunswick church, and the reading to the jury of letters from Mrs. Mills to Mr. Hall, the State introduced a witness to neutralize the testimony of another State witness. The latter had testified that he could not identify Mrs. Hall and her two brothers, on trial for the murder of Mrs. Mills.

Elijah K. Soper, of Highland Park, a New Brunswick suburb, was the witness whose testimony was attacked. He had testified that although he saw an automobile of the touring car type, ammunition, have been sent into the neighborhood of the double slaying, he could not identify the occupants.

Ira B. Nixon is Called. The State then produced Ira B. Nixon, owner of an oil company in New York, who lives in Newark, to say that Soper, four years ago, told him that he had recognized the occupants of the automobile as Mrs. Hall and her two brothers.

The State was able to get this testimony before the jury on the ground that it was surprised by Soper's testimony and wished to neutralize it with that of Nixon's. In effect, the issue was placed before the jury for consideration as to whether Nixon's statement should be accepted as wiping out the failure of Soper to identify the defendants.

Reading of letters, from Mrs. Mills to Mr. Hall, found near the bodies was not accompanied by the tension in court developed when letters from the minister to the choir singer were read Saturday. The woman's letters were no less pertinent than those of the man, but there was much more repetition of favorite phrases.

Defendants Are Calm. The three defendants were calm throughout the reading, which was done by Francis Bergen, Somerset county prosecutor. He read rapidly with no stressing of the affectionate words and sentences. Mrs. Hall was attentive, but between letters when there was some confusion as to order and the pile of manuscript had to be arranged, she spoke a few words to Mrs. Sydney Carpenter, her cousin, who sat each day just behind her.

James Mills, husband of the slain woman, leaned forward in his chair, with an expressionless face. Charlotte Mills, the daughter, was out of the courtroom.

Nixon, in reply to questions on cross-examination, said he had told no one of Soper's conversation with him until Saturday night when he sent for "Jersey city authorities," and communicated the information to them.

Volunteered Information. "Why are you here today?" Case demanded of Nixon on cross-examination. "For four years I have had this information," Nixon replied, "and I decided that I owed it to the State to come here and give it."

"You volunteered this information?" "Yes," Saturday night I sent for the Jersey city authorities. Steps were taken."

U. S. TO RECOGNIZE AT ONCE NEW DIAZ RULE IN NICARAGUA

Election Held Bona Fide in Kellogg Decision; Coolidge Approves.

3 CENTRAL AMERICAN STATES ALSO TO ACT

Calles Exerting Pressure on Guatemala Not to Follow Same Course.

(By ALBERT W. FOX.) The United States government will extend formal recognition to the government of Nicaragua headed by Adolfo Diaz, within the next 48 hours. The decision has been reached by Secretary of State Kellogg and approved by President Coolidge, after the State Department had been apprised of facts which show that the election of Diaz by the Nicaraguan congress has represented a bona fide reorganization of the country in conformity with the terms of the Central American treaties.

Thus, the vexing Nicaraguan problem brought about by Emiliano Chamorro's coup d'etat against the Solorzano coalition government in October, 1925, is about to be solved, and the United States government has played an important part in preventing bloodshed and chaos from disrupting the Nicaraguan republic after the bitter factional fight which followed the fall of the coalition regime. The efforts of the United States were employed with a view to persuading the rival conservative and liberal factions to suspend precipitate action and strive for a constructive program based on the treaties and on an expression of the will of the Nicaraguan people.

Pressure on Guatemala. The Central American republics of Costa Rica, Salvador and Honduras simultaneously with recognition by the United States, Guatemala may follow the same course, although great pressure is being exerted by Mexican supporters of Calles to influence the Guatemalan government to refrain from endorsing the policy of the United States.

Mexico has openly supported the liberals in Nicaragua and it has been stated that Mexican soldiers, arms and ammunition have been sent into Nicaragua in the hope of frustrating an amicable solution based on the plans sponsored by the United States.

The reported Mexican activities, however, have not been an important factor in connection with Secretary Kellogg's final determination to recognize the Diaz regime. The controlling consideration from the standpoint of the State Department here was whether or not the election of Diaz established a government in conformity with the treaties. After Chamorro resigned some days ago, Sebastian Uriza, second designate, became acting president pending an election by the Nicaraguan congress. Article 2 of the Central American conventions, negotiated in Washington and sponsored by the United States, stipulates that there must be a constitutional organization of the Federal Reserve Bank of the United States, and that the government which follows a revolution or coup d'etat can be recognized.

Liberals Forced to Resign. Secretary Kellogg had to consider the question of whether the action by the Nicaraguan congress in electing Adolfo Diaz constituted a reorganization by the freely-elected representatives of the people. It is known that the followers of Chamorro, who is a conservative, were charged with compelling liberals to resign from congress or flee, thereby making the congress at one time appear like a "stacked congress" made up of Chamorro's puppets. But later, under pressure of American efforts, the alleged undemocratic and high-handed methods of certain conservatives were abandoned, it is said. The liberals who had withdrawn from the congress were invited to return to their posts. Steps were taken.

QUEEN DENIES ACTIVITY IN OBTAINING U. S. LOAN

Reported Credit Said to Have No Connection With Cur-tailing of Visit.

FERDINAND AGAIN IS ILL

Chicago, Nov. 15 (By A. P.).—If American bankers have arranged a loan to the Roumanian government, Queen Marie has had no part in the negotiation and knows nothing of it, a spokesman for the royal party announced tonight. The reference was to a dispatch from Bucharest saying that Americans and British bankers were arranging a Roumanian loan.

The spokesman denied also that news of the reported financial arrangement was in any way responsible for Queen Marie's decision to curtail her American tour by sailing on December 24, as originally planned.

In behalf of Queen Marie, it was said the only money received by the queen in this country was a $5 bill which was presented into her hand by a poor woman in New York, who asked that it be given to Roumanian charity.

Bucharest, Roumania, Nov. 15 (By A. P.).—King Ferdinand, who appeared in good health at the opening of parliament yesterday and read the speech from the throne, is again indisposed. A bulletin has been issued by the attending physicians, Drs. Baudot, Romulo, and Mamulea, reading:

"The king is suffering from sigmoiditis (inflammation of the large intestine) but the affection has had no repercussion on the principal organic functions. The king's general condition continues satisfactory and it is hoped that the treatment given will yield favorable results."

R. L. Wentzel Pays $18 to Court; Tooth-Ache Costs Another $5.

Two arrests for speeding in one day is the record of Robert L. Wentzel, 1347 L street northwest, who appeared before Judge Isaac R. Hitt in traffic court last night, to stand trial on both charges.

Wentzel was arrested by Policeman F. R. Tierney for fast driving at Washington circle a few minutes after Motor-cycle Policeman G. M. Atkins had stopped him on G street for the same offense.

The court imposed $18 in fines. William J. Rosenthal, 5227 Georgia avenue northwest, an automobile salesman, told Judge Hitt he was driving fast because a tooth hurt him, when arraigned on a speed charge. He was fined $5 when he admitted he was not headed for a dentist's office when halted by police.

MOVE MADE TO TAKE CITY HEADS' NAMING FROM COOLIDGE AIDS

Gen. Pershing in Group Calling at White House to Urge 3 Men.

BODY IS OUTGROWTH OF CITIZENS' MEETING

Aspinwall, Goodwin, Tucker Advanced by Committee for Rudolph's Post.

A movement to take the appointment of local officials from the hands of the President's local political advisers took definite form yesterday when a committee, including Gen. John J. Pershing, called at the White House and urged selection of one of three men as a successor to District Commissioner Rudolph.

The three men recommended, only two of whom found any favor with those who have been termed the President's local advisers, were Clarence A. Aspinwall, president of the Security Storage Co.; Elliot H. Goodwin, former resident vice president of the United States Chamber of Commerce; and Evan H. Tucker, president of the Northeast Citizens Association.

Tucker, long active in civic affairs, has been endorsed by his own association as well as others. Goodwin's name has crept into the discussion of possibilities, although he is not believed to have been publicly mentioned before. It was the first public mention of Aspinwall.

The committee, composed of Gen. Pershing, Rear Admiral W. L. Rodgers, U. S. N., retired, president of the Dupont Circle Citizens Association; Gen. John A. Johnson, retired, former engineer commissioner; Alvin Dodd, of the United States Chamber of Commerce, and Dr. William Mather Lewis, president of George Washington University, grew out of a meeting of citizens' association representatives last spring, sponsored by the Dupont citizens.

Plan to Enlarge Group. It is the plan, it is understood, to greatly enlarge the committee, patterned after a civic committee in Detroit, although the local committee plans to go no further than to recommend appointments for local offices. It will be nonpartisan, according to plans, and will not disapprove of any one.

Whenever a vacancy occurs this committee will set to work to find an available successor, or two or three more prospects. It will take those publicly mentioned, look into their qualifications and eligibility, as well as to look for prospects not publicly mentioned, and it will submit those of whom it approves to the President, making no mention of those it disapproves.

This was the procedure in regard to the three names submitted yesterday. The committee has looked into their qualifications and eligibility, and it is also understood to have ascertained that any one of the three would accept the place.

Just how much influence the movement will have remains to be determined and its strength will be increased, it is pointed out, largely by the success it has with its initial undertaking.

After the meeting sponsored by the Dupont association last spring, the movement was generally lost sight of. The visit to the White House of the committee was a surprise to and was greeted with mingled feelings by the President's local advisers.

Pershing a Surprise. Their greatest surprise lay in Gen. Pershing's participation. He had not been known to be a member of the committee.

In this connection, however, it is recalled the general made a speech in Chicago Armistice day stressing the responsibility to government that rests on the citizen. He particularly emphasized the need of a resident taking an active part in the affairs of his "home town."

The President's local advisers—those who have been seeking a man for the place—made known unreservedly that they favored Aspinwall of the three recommended by the committee. In fact, they seemed to appreciate the suggestion of his name. They did not, however, commit themselves to him.

The man the President wants, it was said, is one who has had experience in business and financial matters—a qualification required of Rudolph's successor. Aspinwall, they said, seems to fit.

In the meantime, there was a boom in banking circles for H. H. McKee, president of the National Capital Bank. Several of his friends gave him the name.

Richardson Indorsed For Commissioner

Dr. George H. Richardson, president of the Federation of Civic Associations, was indorsed for District Commissioner by the Public Interest Association of East Washington last night in the parish hall of Calvary Episcopal church. A membership drive was organized among colored citizens of Northeast and Southeast sections.

The associations voted to affiliate with the Public School Association of the District of Columbia and named Theodore A. Bradford as a delegate to that body.

INTOXICATED DRIVING PENALTY ALTERATION ASKED BY ELDREDGE

Mandatory Jail Sentence Is Hard to Enforce, Director Tells Committee.

PLEA ALSO IS MADE FOR OFFICIAL TESTER

Zihlman Says Congress Is Likely to Be Hostile to Changes in Law.

Recommendation by Traffic Director
Eldridge that the driving while drunk penalty in the traffic act be modified and a warning by Chairman Zihlman of the House District committee, that Congress would not likely be in the mood to make any changes, marked yesterday's hearing of the investigating subcommittee.

Mr. Eldridge was reluctant to make any recommendations at this time and that concerning the penalty modification was more or less drawn from him by Representative Gibson, chairman of the subcommittee. The traffic director virtually wrote the drastic penalties now in the act.

He admitted, however, that the mandatory jail sentence for driving while drunk was so severe that it was difficult to get convictions. He recommended that an alternative jail sentence be provided. It was Mr. Eldridge's thought that he can deal drastically with this type of offender through his permit revocation power.

Tester for Intoxicated.

Mr. Eldridge also advocated the creation of an official tester to determine the state of driver's mind. It is the belief of the traffic director that the state of mind of a driver is a factor in the commission of the offense. This brought on a discussion among Mr. Gibson, Representative Houston, of Delaware, and Representative Frank R.
Reid, of Illinois, who has returned to take part in the hearings, as to just when a person is drunk and when he is not. The traffic director recited verse to the effect that a man is only drunk when he can not arise from the floor.

It was Mr. Houston's opinion, concurred in by other committee members, however, that one so far gone as that was the least of a menace. It is the intoxicated driver still moving about that must be reckoned with, it was said.

Mr. Zihlman pointed out that Congress has been wrestling with the District traffic act for two sessions, and that it was his opinion that it would take up another subject this session.

The committee chairman also took the traffic director to task about the "traffic muddle" around the Union station. The latter promised, Mr. Zihl-man said, to have the matter cleared up, but all that has been done was the removal of a number of private hackers to a point behind a large four-way.

Sustains Public's Right.

"The public has as much right," said
Mr. Zihlman, "to use the auto entrance as a single tax company."

Mr. Eldridge also advocated a provision in the traffic act making it a case of reckless driving to drive at more than 15 miles an hour on crowded streets, crowded intersections or bridges.

At the morning session, the draft of Board of Trade recommendations made public sometime ago, were placed in the record. The trade board suggested that no change be made in the present form of local government but urged national autonomy as opposed to local autonomy.

It also urged that the District be given access to Federal courts, and Mr. Gus-son said he would ask for an amplification of this recommendation.

Mr. Eldridge was asked by the committee to submit a study of immunity given to traffic violators among members of the diplomatic corps. Not only are the diplomats immune, but their attaches and servants, it was testified.
District Auditor Donovan will appear before the committee at 10 o'clock this morning.

Child Seriously Hurt; Hit at Play by Auto

Darting into the street in front of his home yesterday, Clarence Vogel, 6 years old, 1371 B street southeast, was knocked down by an automobile driven by Edward A. Neuman, 33 years old, 860 Tenth street northwest. He is in a grave condition at Casualty hospital, suffering from a fracture of the skull.
With several other children, the boy was playing on the sidewalk in front of his home, and ran directly into the path of the car, which was eastbound on B street. Neuman took the child to the hospital, where Dr. A.
Gondolfo attended him. Police of the Fifth precinct were informed by witnesses that Neuman did all in his power to avert striking the child. He was not detained.

Vivisection Assailed By Duchess in Speech

American humanitarians should boycott remedies arrived at through the use of animal vivisection, the Duchess of Hamilton and Brandon, English humanitarian, said last night in a public address at the Carlton hotel. According to the duchess, her seven children never have been vaccinated, and are healthy in every way.

Miss Lind-a-Hagby, director of the Animal Defense and Antivivisection society of London, also spoke, holding cancer now prevalent in therapy, despite the fact that more vivisection experiments have been performed on animals for that disease than any other.
In England doctors are forbidden by law to vivisection animals for the sake of skill, she said.

the Post hour radio audience over WBC
last night.

Gen. Winfield Scott, said to have been gourmet of the war, was among said to have disputed the proper price of a barrel of oysters and terrapins.

Daniel Webster foretook his role of statesman once in awhile also to select food for his table.

Capt. Edwin T. Pollock, superintendent of the naval observatory, discussed the work of the observatory in deter-

the Post hour audience into a complete disregard of whatever the hour.

Ottile Cordway, prima donna of "Moonlight" and star of a Keith's theatrical revue, sang "Iran Konaevich," Russian baritone, of the Rialto theater, sang the Volga boat song.

Raymond and William Hart, of the Walter T. Hays studio, played comedies. They appear as "The Hart Boys," and their repertoire ranged from the feet-smacking plunkings of the old-time darky songs to the other end of the scale.

Coras Sponler, soprano, accompanied at the piano by Margaret Bowie Grant, sang several songs. Miss Sponler's soprano recital concluded The Post hour program, which was one of the most unusual and well balanced bringing several telephone calls to the studio for encores.

JEWS TURN TO SOIL, CONVENTION HEARS; 20,000 NOW TILLERS

Farm Population Recruited From Immigrants Was
Only 1,100 in 1900.

TOTAL NOW IS 75,000,
WITH THEIR FAMILIES

Radios Help Agriculturists to Overcome "Utter Isolation" of Race.

In direct opposition to the cityward trend of rural peoples all over the world, the Jew is turning more and more to the soil as a means of livelihood, Mrs. Elmer Eckhouse, Newark, N. J., in charge of the department of farm and rural work, told delegates attending the triennial convention of the National Council of Jewish Women yesterday at the Washington hotel.

There now are 20,000 Jewish farmers in the United States, and they till more than 1,000,000 acres of land, it was disclosed. With the members of their families they comprise a population of 85,000. These farmers are congregated for the most part near the large cities, Mrs. Eckhouse said.

The fact there are so many Jewish farmers has been a surprise and revelation to many council members, Mrs.
Eckhouse declared. She said many have asked the question "why the Jewish farmers." To this she replied:
"Was it the yearning that for so many centuries has been stifled in the narrow ghettos of the world? Was it the hope that was crushed beneath the prejudice and the persecution of eastern Europe? Was it the longing of an ancient people to once again tend the rock and harvest the grain, or that human desire of an exiled race constantly denied the right to engage in agriculture, to once again live in the open and to own and till a bit of land that it might call its own?"

Farmers on Increase.

Whatever the cause, the number of Jewish farmers is rapidly on the increase. Their ranks are recruited largely from the immigrants who come from Europe, bearing out Mrs. Eckhouse's observation that the outburst might be the result of a latent desire crushed and restrained in Europe.

In 1900 the Jewish farm population in this country was only 1,100. In 1910 the population was 25,000, revealing in comparison with the present figures that the movement shows no signs of abating. It may be left to the Jew, therefore, to solve the problem of the exodus from farm to city in this country.

The farm and rural department of the council, under the directorship of Miss Anna C. Brenner, of New York, has accomplished much toward improvement of conditions among Jewish farm families.

One of the outstanding things, it was reported, had been the installation by the American Radio Corporation of community radios in communities designated by the department officers.

Then, the following had the Jewish services broadcast for the first time in history for the benefit of these isolated rural Jews.

The matter of aid to immigrants was discussed at the meeting, following a report by Mrs. Florina Leaker, of New York, who has charge of that department. Mrs. Sidney J. Freiberg, of Cincinnati, gave a report of the committee on extension. Miss Sara K. Schottenfels, of New York, gave a report on field experiment. Mrs. Rebecca M. Seligman, of New York, field secretary, reported on her work. Mrs. William Dick Sporborg, president, Mrs. Margaret Hays Baum, of Rochester, N. Y., was timekeeper. Discussion groups were conducted following the session.

Talks on Immigration.

Ellis island rapidly is becoming a memory under the system of examination of immigrants abroad by United States consuls, William W. Husbard, Second Assistant Secretary of Labor, declared at the meeting last night. The present law works hardship, he admitted, but asserted it did inculcable good. The dread of immigration officials long has been to establish a means of examination abroad, he said, adding that few now are turned back on this country.

American rural life now is at an "ignorant peasantry," the other, by solution of present problems, to an ideal citizenship, R. W. Dunlap, Second Asst.
Secretary of Agriculture, declared.

Playlets were presented depicting the work of the council among immigrants and on the farm. The Americanization School association orchestra played.

Mrs. Sporborg and Mrs. Herbert E. Ottenheimer presided. Mrs. Samuel Berkman, of Charleston, S. C., acted as timekeeper.

ple, regardless of faith or creed, in lifting our neighbors to an equal plane of comfort and happiness.

DUKE AND DUCHESS WERE NOT MARRIED, IS BISHOP'S OPINION

Former Consuelo Vanderbilt
Did Not Give Her Willing Consent, It Is Held.

FORCED INTO CONTRACT, WAS ANNULMENT PLA

Granting of Her Request Is Criticized by Manning; Held Incredible.

London, Nov. 15 (By A. P.).—The strange case of the annulment of the marriage between the Duke of Marlborough and Consuelo Vanderbilt, after 20 years of married life, the birth of two children and a divorce, is attracting immense attention here and there is great searching of precedents and records of the laws of the Roman Catholic Church.

Since their divorce the duke has married Miss Gladys Deacon and Consuelo has entered into matrimonial ties with Jacques Balsan, of France. The original marriage, sought after 20 years of married life, the birth of two children and a divorce, is attracting immense attention here and there is great searching of precedents and records of the laws of the Roman Catholic Church.

One explanation seems to be that Consuelo, desirous of regularizing her marriage with Col. Balsan in the eyes of the Catholic Church, sought a decree of annulment from Rome. The Catholic Church refuses to recognize divorce and therefore regarded the Balsan marriage as invalid.

Family Influence Alleged.

Ecclesiastical circles are authority for the statement that the former duchess made her appeal for annulment on the ground that she had been induced to marry Marlborough by influences brought to bear upon her.

fore Grange Meeting.

Amazing, Says Manning.

New York, Nov. 15 (By A. P.).—The authorities of the Protestant Episcopal Church and society were stirred today by further revelations regarding the annulment of the marriage of the Duke of Marlborough and the former Consuelo Vanderbilt of New York.

Bishop William Manning, head of the Episcopal diocese of New York, said that the annulment was "amazing and incredible." The marriage was annulled by a decree of the diocesan court at Southwark, England, which was upheld by the tribunal of the Rota in Rome.

Announcement that annulment was granted on a plea of the former duchess has added to the scandal. She divorced the duke several years ago and now is the wife of Col. Jacques Balsan, of France. A report that Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, who divorced William K. Vanderbilt, father of the former duchess, appeared with other relatives before the diocesan court and testified that duress was used in obtaining the consent of Miss Vanderbilt to her marriage with Marlborough has not been confirmed.

When Marlborough and Consuelo Vanderbilt were married, both were Episcopalians. After their divorce the duke married Col. Balsan, a Catholic. The duke married Miss Gladys Deacon, of Boston, who was a bride-maid at the Marlborough wedding and who is a Catholic.

Father Opposed Marriage.

It was reported before the Marlborough marriage that Consuelo's father opposed the union, but that Mrs. Vanderbilt insisted upon it. From the $2,500,000 dot given by Mr. Vanderbilt as a marriage settlement the duke still is receiving an income of about $1,000 per week. The agreement provided that the duke and duchess were to receive the income from the dot and that on their deaths the income was to go to their heirs. Nothing concerning a divorce was contained in the marriage agreement.

Letter to Marshal Cites King's Proclamation to Troops
on Yser in 1914.

HELD THE LINE, HE SAYS

White Plains, N. Y., Nov. 15 (By A. P.).—Newspaper articles bearing the name of Frances "Peaches" Browning as author and describing her life with her husband, Edward W. Browning, were not written by her and she seldom read them, the girl wife's attorney declared today at a hearing on her application for $4,000 a month alimony and $25,000 counsel fees.

The newspaper articles first were mentioned by John E. Mack, of Poughkeepsie, counsel for the wealthy, middle-aged real estate dealer.

"Mr. Browning," said Attorney Mack, "is not averse to alleviating the reputed financial distress of Mrs. Browning, but he objects to the newspaper articles she writes, for some of which are provided illustrations that reveal my client on his hands and knees barking 'Woof! Woof! I am a bear!'"

"The articles," Henry Epstein, counsel for "Peaches," averred, "were not written by my client. Indeed, she never even read all of them, before or after printing. And of the $1,000 she was paid for the articles, nothing remains. She spent it all."

In reserving decision on alimony and counsel fees, Justice Morschauser said that it was apparent counsel for both "Peaches" and Mr. Browning were agreed that they should be paid and that it remained only to determine the amount. A decision was promised next Saturday or Monday.

Documents filed by counsel for "Peaches" in support of her alleged justification for quitting the domicile of her husband were impounded by the court. Their contents were reputed to be too sensational for public reading or printing.

BELGIAN RULER DENIES FOCH HALTED RETREAT

Letter to Marshal Cites King's Proclamation to Troops
on Yser in 1914.

HELD THE LINE, HE SAYS

White Plains, N. Y., Nov. 15 (By A. P.).—Albert, King of the Belgians, takes exception to the assertion alleged to have been made by Marshal Foch, generalissimo of the allied forces in the world war, that he had advised the Belgians against falling back at a critical moment in the battle of the Yser in 1914.

In a letter to Marshal Foch under date of November 13, King Albert says that, far from being persuaded by Marshal Foch, he had issued a proclamation three days prior to Foch's visit to him, that mention of retreat would be treason. He had absolutely opposed any retreat, and he added, the Belgians had held the line.

Marshal Foch's alleged statement was published in the Matin on the responsibility of the author of the Armistice day article, Stephane Lauzanne, the editor of that paper, and the marshal declined to comment on the king's letter. Intimate friends of the marshal declare emphatically that he is incapable of the slightest disloyalty to King Albert or the Belgian army, but say it is impossible for him to make a public declaration concerning an article for which he was not responsible.

The published memoirs of many different generals commanding on both sides during the war, it is recalled, have amply proven how difficult it is for even the most competent military authorities to agree as to just how things went.

The king denies any recollection of Foch leaving the memorandum against retreat which the marshal was quoted as saying he gave to both Albert and Sir John French and part of the phraseology of which Foch gave M. Lauzanne.

Marshal Foch's revelations of the "inside story" was incidental to his observation that he seldom commanded but generally persuaded. He recalled that he was without authority at that time, but "although I hadn't the right to command, I commanded."

PENNSYLVANIA G. O. P. FACTIONS SIGN PACT FOR PEACE IN STATE

Reed to Be Unopposed in 1928 Primary and Also Vare, If Unseated.

RECESS APPOINTMENT LEFT OPEN FOR GRUNDY

Agreement Applies Not Only to National Offices, But to Control at Home.

By NORMAN W. BAXTER.

Political peace has been signed in Pennsylvania with a pact that will not only take care of the spheres of influence to be occupied by three machines within the Republican party there, but smooth the future paths of both William S. Vare and Senator David A. Reed.

Most important from a national standpoint is the agreement which the Capital has been reached under which Vare would be given the undisputed right to run for his own unexpired term, if he shall have been denied his seat at the opening of the Seventieth Congress.

The Republican party in Pennsylvania, according to the reports that reach here, is entirely ready to meet the contingency that may arise if a hostile Senate should decide that the primary and election just passed were of such a character as to prevent Vare from taking his seat.

Grundy May Be Senator.

The first step in this program would be the selection of Vare's successor. The appointment would rest with Gov. Fisher, who will take office in January, when Gov. Pinchot leaves the gubernatorial mansion in Harrisburg. The incoming State executive is a Grundy man and the word has come from Pennsylvania that if he does not name Joseph F. Grundy he will designate the man that Mr. Grundy wishes to have come to the United States Senate.

The senator by appointment will hold office, under the Pennsylvania law, until the general election next following, which in this instance would be the one of 1928, when Senator Reed will be a candidate for reelection.

The agreement provides, it is understood, that in that primary Vare will be unopposed for the unexpired term and Senator Reed will be without machine opposition for the long term, a set of circumstances which will give the Vare and Mellon machines both a candidate for the Senate, whose candidacy is to be furthered mutually. The Grundy machine will have received the recompense by virtue of the recess appointment.

Brewing Since Primary.

That some such political alliance between the three factions which dominate the Republican party in Pennsylvania was in the making has been apparent ever since the primary. Within two weeks after Vare had defeated Senator George Wharton Pepper in the primary, the first offensive and defensive alliance was concluded, designed to win the election for Vare.

Since then there have been other steps tending to ratify the tripartite agreement, which will extend not only to national office but to internal control of the State as well.

The three factions represent as many forces in Pennsylvania politics. The Mellon machine, of comparatively recent origin, is the political medium of the financial interests of the State. The Grundy machine, which functioned with considerable success in the days when the late Bos Penrose controlled the State politically, is the arm of the Manufacturers association and those other elements in the State interested in protection. The Vare machine is Philadelphia and the Republican majority of virtually 250,000, which can be counted upon to support any candidate selected by the bosses.

It was fairly obvious following the primary that no one of the three could hope to do much without the other. The Mellon and Grundy machines tried hard to break the grip which Vare had upon the city of Philadelphia, but having done so decided the best thing to do was to have peace rather than war.

The Vare machine failed in the election to demonstrate that it has anything like a State-wide grasp, so that it, too, ought to have no disinclination to do anything that may work for harmony and proper division of patronage.

The program will, of course, if it has to be carried out, in so far as the election of Vare is concerned, have an interesting reflection in Washington. The Senate already may have to face the problem of Frank L. Smith, of Illinois, as a member of the Sixty-ninth Congress in good standing and under charges of disloyalty.

Should the ramifications of the Pennsylvania alliance work out, the equally interesting point will arrive of Vare, Pennsylvania, being denied a seat in the first session of the Seventieth Congress, but coming back to its second meeting a duly accredited representative of the State. For Vare, in case of his election in 1928, would take office immediately and not have to wait for the Seventy-first Congress to convene.

Political opinion yesterday was that his status in such an event would be as clear as that of Smith is expected to be, if the latter should come here by appointment in the event of Senator William B. McKinley's death. In an uncontested primary Vare would be called upon for only nominal expenses, and in an election in which both he and Senator Reed were candidates, it is highly improbable that any Democratic candidate would have any sort of a chance to make the race close. There would, therefore, be no other choice, senators say, but to seat Vare as a duly and regularly elected member of the Senate.

SIMPLE CEREMONY TO BURY UNCLE JOE

Former Speaker to Be Interred as Private Citizen at Illinois Home.

Danville, Ill., Nov. 15 (By A. P.).—With all the simplicity of his Quaker heritage, Joseph G. Cannon's body will be borne to the grave tomorrow as that of a private citizen.

Not even a flag will cover the casket of the man who served for 42 years in the national House of Representatives and for eight years as its Speaker. The men of state, headed by Vice President Charles G. Dawes, who will come in numbers to pay final tribute, will attend the services as friends and coworkers and not as envoys of the government he served, although the Vice President will come as representative of President Coolidge.

(By the Associated Press.)

As a tribute to the Speaker under whom he served for many years, William Tyler Page, clerk of the House, yesterday penned a free verse "parliamentary ode" to the memory of "Uncle Joe" Cannon. It follows:

Here the gavel fell.
The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.
The previous question is ordered.
Debate is exhausted.
The subject is closed to amendment.
Points of order can not be made nor reserved.
The Speaker has left the chair and gone into the committee of the whole.
Where the point of "no quorum" is never raised.
Where the great majority rules, and from whence no adverse report ever comes.
Where no dilatory motions are entertained, nor filibustering practiced—
Where minorities claim no rights.
Where rules are superfluous, decorum is preserved, and Where politics is adjourned.

Jury Clears Officials In Illinois Dry Trial

Chicago, Nov. 15 (By A. P.).—Senator Lowell B. Mason and Maj. Percy Owen, former prohibition director in Illinois, late today were found not guilty by a Federal jury of charges of conspiracy to violate the prohibition law. The jury deliberated less than two hours.

Both defendants and their wives were in court when the verdict was read.

In charging the jury, Judge Carpenter said that the government had alleged 30 or 40 overt acts of conspiracy to withdraw wine illegally.

JERSEY STANDARD OIL COMPANY VOTES SPECIAL DIVIDEND

12 1/2 Cents Added to Regular 25-Cent Quarterly Return on Common Stock.

$200,000,000 PREFERRED SHARES TO BE RETIRED

Dupont and Kennecott Copper Also Raise Payments to Stockholders From Earnings.

New York, Nov. 15 (By A. P.).—Directors of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey today declared an extra dividend of 12 1/2 cents a share on the common stock, in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents, and voted to retire $200,000,000 outstanding preferred stock on March 15 at $115 per share.

In connection with the plan to retire the preferred, the Standard Oil directors voted to issue 3,449,317 shares of additional common, giving stockholders the right to purchase one new share for each six shares now held, and also authorized the issuance of $120,000,000 20-year, 5-per cent debentures.

The company issued the following statement:

"The declaration of the extra payment upon the common stock made possible by the fact that earnings for the current fiscal period have exceeded the amounts required for the regular dividends and for the necessary expansion of plant and equipment. The payment of any extra dividends in the future will be the subject of consideration, but will depend entirely upon the continuance of conditions which have made today's declaration possible."

Calls Preferred Stock.

"It was decided today," the statement added, "to issue a call in due course for the redemption on March 15, 1927, of the company's outstanding preferred stock, approximately 2,000,000 shares, at 115 per cent of its par value. To provide in part such funds as may be necessary for the redemption of the preferred stock, the directors voted to issue and to offer ratably to the common stock holders at their par value of $25 a share 3,449,317 shares of additional common stock, being in proportion of one new share for each six outstanding, and stockholders will receive rights to subscribe in this proportion. Payments for the new shares are to be made in two equal installments—one on January 15, 1927, and the other on March 14.

"Furthermore, the directors authorize the sale to J. P. Morgan & Co. of an issue of $120,000,000 of twenty-year 5 per cent debentures. To such of the company's preferred stock holders as may be interested in continuing an investment in Standard Oil of New Jersey securities the company calls attention at this time to the prospective offer of these debentures by J. Two British Baby Planes Take Off for Australia

London, Nov. 15 (By A. P.).—One of the most daring adventures in the history of aviation began yesterday when, the Westminster Gazette announces, two British civilian pilots, Neville Stack and Bernard Leete, started in great secrecy from the airfield at Hendon in two Baby Moth planes for a destination which is officially described as "unknown," but which they admit is ultimately Australia.

Pilot Stack informed the Gazette that each man would act as his own mechanic, helping each other in the event of trouble. Their kit weighs only ten pounds.

The adventure is being privately financed, with the idea of proving the practicality of long flights in small machines.

such additional shares of common stock and $120,000,000 debentures as above described will be made available from the company's treasury."

Directors of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. today declared an extra dividend of $5 a share on the common stock and a quarterly dividend of $1.75 a share, placing the new stock on an annual dividend basis of $7 a share.

The annual dividend rate on common stock of the Kennecott Copper Co. was increased from $4 to $5 a share today when directors declared a quarterly payment of $1.25. The dividend is payable January 2 to stock of record December 3.

LAFAYETTE YOUNG DIES; NOTED EDITOR IN IOWA

Des Moines Publisher Passes Away in Bath Parlor at Age of 78.

ONCE WAS U. S. SENATOR

Des Moines, Iowa, Nov. 15 (By A. P.).—Lafayette Young, editor of the Des Moines Daily Capital, and a former United States senator from Iowa, died here today from heart disease.

Death came peacefully to the veteran editor and publisher at a bath parlor. He lay down to rest after his bath and an attendant noticed that he seemed to be growing weaker. Death occurred shortly after a doctor arrived.

"Laf" Young was born on a farm near Eddyville, Monroe county, Iowa, May 10, 1848, a descendant of Commodore Barney, a distinguished officer of the revolutionary war.

In 1890 he became owner and publisher of the Des Moines Capital. Mr. Young married Miss Josephine Bolton on March 20, 1870. They had three children, Lafayette Young, Jr., and Harold Young, of Des Moines, and Mrs. Nellie Brown Young Herrick of Olean, N. Y. Mrs. Herrick died in February, 1923.

On the death of Senator Jonathan P. Dolliver of Iowa, October 15, 1910, Mr. Young was appointed United States senator and served in that capacity until April, 1911. Long before his service in the Senate, however, Mr.

INDIANA UTILITIES SOUGHT POLITICAL CONTROL, IS CHARGE

Suit Cites Samuel and Martin Insull and Harley I. Clark
as Contributors.

$19,000 GIVEN JACKSON
CITY COUNSEL ALLEGES

Public Service Commissioners Listed in Application for Injunction; Denials Entered.

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 15 (By A. P.).—Campaign contributions were made to Republican candidates in the 1924 election by Indiana by public utility operators of Chicago and Indianapolis for the purpose of retaining control of the public service commission, only individuals who would be unduly and illegally favorable to the representatives of the utilities, it was alleged in an injunction suit filed here today by Alva J. Rucker, corporation counsel.

The suit seeks to prevent a hearing by the Indiana public service commission of the petition for a merger of two local electric power companies. In addition to charging the utility interests with conspiring against power consumers of Indianapolis the complaint alleges that in furtherance of plans to obtain control of utilities in other States attempts were made to procure the favor of public service commissions and political officers, "by liberal donations to campaign funds of governors who had the appointment of such commissions and by donations to campaign funds of members on such commissions when aspiring to other office, including the office of senator in the Senate of the United States."

Charges Involve Governor. Utilities operators named in the complaint were Samuel and Martin Insull, and Harley I. Clark, all of Chicago; Harry Reid, and Robert I. Todd, both of Indianapolis; D. C. Stephenson, former grand dragon of the Ku Klux Klan, was also mentioned. A grand jury here now has under investigation charges that high State officials were corrupted by Stephenson.

The specific sum of $19,000, the complaint alleges, was paid to Gov. Ed Jackson and John W. McCordie, chairman of the public service commission, during the campaign of 1924, for the purpose of retaining McCordie as a member of the commission, and to obtain the appointment of Clyde Jones as another commission member.

Samuel R. Artman, another commissioner, entered the conspiracy, the complaint charges, in order to obtain support of the utilities in his behalf as Republican candidate for judge of the State supreme court.

The allegations brought denial from

Martin Insull, in Chicago, and from nearly all the Indianapolis men mentioned.

The merger which Rucker seeks to prevent in that of the Merchants Light & Heat Co. and the Indianapolis Light & Heat Co. The former company is owned by the Central Indiana Power Co. and the Middle-West Utilities Co., both of which are holding companies dominated by the Insull interests. The Indianapolis Power & Light Corporation, organized in Delaware and controlled by Clark, owns 71.43 per cent of the stock of the Indianapolis Light & Heat Co., and Middle-West Utilities Co., incorporated in Illinois, owns 28.5 per cent.

A hearing on the merger petition has been set for November 18. The proposed merger has been attacked by local civic organizations as likely to bring an increase in light and power rates.

Chicago, Nov. 15 (By A. P.).—Samuel Insull, Chicago utilities executive, before the Senate campaign funds investigating committee here, told of contributions of $125,000 to the primary campaign fund of Senator-elect Frank L. Smith and other contributions to Chicago politicians, but said he made no other political donations.

This was recalled today by his associates in answer to charges made in Indianapolis by Alva J. Rucker, corporation counsel of that city. Samuel Insull was out of the city. Martin Insull, however, denied knowledge of such a payment to any one. Mr. Clarke, president of the Utilities Power & Light Corporation, not an Insull associate, was out of the city.

IOWA BANKER KILLS WIFE, WOUNDS SISTER-IN-LAW

John Keeline Commits Suicide
After Shooting Women at Council Bluffs Home.

ONE VICTIM MAY RECOVER

Council Bluffs, Iowa, Nov. 15 (By A. P.).—John Keeline today shot and killed his wife and wounded her sister-in-law, Mrs. Henry Andreeson. He then committed suicide. The shooting occurred at the Keeline home.

Keeline is a member of one of the oldest and best known families in this city. He is known as a financier and sportsman and at one time was connected with the Council Bluffs Savings Bank, of which he was a stockholder. Mrs. Andreeson had been staying at the Keeline home during the absence of Keeline on a business trip. Mrs. Andreeson was shot in the shoulder. It is believed she will recover and be able to give some details of the tragedy. Lying in a bed near the spot where Mrs. Keeline was shot, neighbors found her two young babies. They were crying and laughing. Mrs. Keeline's assistance and was shot.

Mrs. A. H. Andreeson, mother of Mrs. Keeline, said that her daughter visited her yesterday and expressed a fear that her husband would kill her. She reported Keeline had kept a loaded revolver near him for weeks.

Mrs. Andreeson said her daughter told her she took the gun away a few days ago and hid it, but her husband compelled her to return it.

South Wales Miners Accept Peace Terms

The action of South Wales has been awaited by the country with greater anxiety than that of any other section because 250,000 miners are involved, among them being the bulk of the so-called red section of the miners federation.

THAW WILL DEFEND GIRL WHO SLEW MAN

Check "for Any Amount" Is Offered, Attorney for Mrs.
Denino Announces.

New York, Nov. 15 (By A. P.).—Samuel Goldstein, attorney for Mrs. Catherine Denino, 16-year-old wife who confessed killing Luigi Pino because he had assaulted and blackmailed her, announced today that Harry K. Thaw, Pittsburgh heir to the Thaw millions, had telephoned him that a check for "any amount" would be sent him to defray the expense of the girl-wife.

Mrs. Denino told police that Pino, 34, had betrayed her when she was 12 years old and had attempted, after marriage, to blackmail her, using the assault as a basis of revelations he would make to her friends unless she paid him money he demanded.

With no trace of emotion, Mrs. Denino told police she waited, pistol ready, for Pino to enter a Bronx barber shop Saturday night. As Pino entered Mrs. Denino shot him and turned the weapon on herself. It jammed and the bullet meant to end her life was still in the chamber when police took the pistol from her.

DISORDERS IN MEXICO.

The Yaqui uprising and disturbances elsewhere throughout Mexico are engrossing the attention of the Mexican army. An attack by 500 Yaquis last week upon a Mexican force resulted in heavy casualties on both sides. Among the Indians were white men handling machine guns, "which did deadly execution," according to the dispatches. These white men are said by Mexican army officers to be Americans.

In Chihuahua the federal forces are running down alleged revolutionists who are said to have been rallying considerable force, equipped with arms smuggled across the Rio Grande. The revolutionists are reported to have used the battle cry, "Viva Cristo Rey," indicating that the religious susceptibilities of the people have been played upon in order to stir them into revolt against the Calles government. In Oaxaca, Vera Cruz, Sinaloa, Tamaulipas and other states disturbances are reported. It is significant that while the disorders are attributed to "bandits," the victims of the attacks are Mexican troops.

Mexican troops operating against the Yaquis have been supplied with motor trucks obtained from the United States. It is not made clear how the trucks will be benefited by motor trucks in a country that is destitute of roads. Certainly they can not make their way to the Yaqui strongholds in motor cars, and unless they can carry the fighting into the mountains they will not be able to crush the Indians. Men for man, the Yaquis are superior to the kind of Mexicans that are pressed into infantry service.

POTASSIUM.

The search for potash, which has been in progress for a century, seems likely to produce results in the near future. Potash salts are essential in many industries, and without potash agriculture could no longer exist.

For many years Germany and France have supplied the greater part of the American demand for this mineral substance. During the late war, when importations were practically impossible, efforts were made to locate the mineral bases of potash salts in various States of the West. Some success followed, and discoveries were made in Utah and Texas which led to the hope that the United States might soon become independent of the European product. But until very recently little has been accomplished toward a scientific and thorough search. At the last session, however, Congress appropriated $100,000 for potash explorations under the joint auspices of the Departments of the Interior and Commerce.

This work has been so far successful that the Interior Department, through the geological survey, is able to announce that the discovery has been made of several minerals in Texas and New Mexico which afford increasing evidence of similarity to the famous deposits of France and Germany. Thus far the extent of these deposits has not been determined, but core borings will be made at once and chemical and other tests will be conducted to determine the extent and value of the deposits.

The importance of this investigation will be realized when it is remembered that in 1925 there were imported from Europe nearly 1,000,000 tons of potassium salts.

TOM EDISON'S VISION.

Coming after the pessimistic forebodings of Dean Inge, the interview granted recently by Thomas A. Edison is refreshing, despite the fact that the city of the future which he attempts to describe appears on the surface to have several unpleasant features. In this future city, time saving will be of primary importance, traffic congestion will be solved by the mathematician, crime will be squelched by the scientific policeman, and taxes will become astonishingly low with government of the cities by experts. One may shudder at the prospect of life in which the saving of minutes will be of paramount importance, but solution of any sort of the traffic situation will be accepted eagerly, decrease of crime will be awaited anxiously, and astonishingly low taxes certainly will mark the advent of the millennium.

When the inventor pictures the race rapidly becoming deaf, one may feel apprehensive. The evil would not be unmitigated, however, when one considers the opportunity which will be presented humankind to crawl behind a wall of silence away from noise and disconcerting outbreaks. The race may possibly become an aloof people given much to meditation, and, if so, it is quite possible that there will be little or no need of concentrating to such an abnormal extent on time saving.

The skyscraper will have to be restricted, for apparently by concentrating huge masses of people within a comparatively small area it produces such congestion as to make its further development undesirable. Cross streets will have to be depressed, so that they will run beneath thoroughfares in tunnels. Express streets will have to be designated as distinct from accommodation roadways. The roofs of buildings will be converted into landing fields for a type of airplane yet to be developed, which can rise vertically into the air and land on a relatively small area.

All in all it looks like a pretty good plan. Possibly Mr. Edison was one of his two specialties, either some new invention, or through a questionnaire, may be able to hasten the day.

AMERICA LAGS BEHIND.

The amazing efficiency of Italian engineers and aviators is shown by the ease in which Maj. Mario de Bernardi won the Schneider cup. He smashed several world records in winning the cup, and placed Italy far in the lead in the matter of speedy flying.

This triumph was due partly to Maj. de Bernardi's own skill and partly to the superiority of the Macchi seaplane. The comparison between this latest Italian plane and the best that America has produced is calculated to chasten American pride. The Italian machine is small, light and equipped with a motor that develops 200 horsepower more than the equivalent American engine.

Overseas countries now hold the records for nonstop distance flight, altitude and speed. The United States lags behind, also, in air passenger service, although it is foremost in air mail service. Taking everything into consideration, it can not be said that Americans have been particularly brilliant in developing their invention of flying. When Italians beat them in motor building, and Frenchmen beat them in long distance nonstop flying, and Englishmen beat them in air passenger traffic, it is evident that the United States is not fully alive to its opportunities.

PUBLIC UTILITIES.

The rapid growth of public utilities in the United States during the last 25 years is one of the outstanding features of the economic advance of the country. As population increases, inventions multiply and the wants of the people increase, the field of public utilities widens.

These public utilities include electricity, gas, street railways and telephones, to say nothing of commercial aviation and radio communication, the latest agencies to enter the field of public service.

During the first nine months of 1926 the four public utilities first mentioned have absorbed more than $1,500,000,000 of American capital through the sale of securities, practically all of which has been expended in extensions and improvements. Only about $268,000,000 represents refunding of previous obligations. This sale of public utility securities represents about 34 per cent of all the securities sold in the United States during that period.

These four main branches of public utilities now represent an investment of about $21,500,000,000, and in a short time will exceed the total investments in the steam railroads of the country. The investment may be divided as follows: Electric light and power, $8,000,000,000; electric street railway, $6,000,000,000; manufactured gas industry, $4,000,000,000; telephone, $3,500,000,000. It is impossible at present to give an accurate estimate of the capital invested in commercial aviation and radio communication.

This vast amount of capital invested in public utilities securities is scattered among millions of investors and security holders. There has been an enormous increase in the number of small stockholders in great corporations. The trend of recent years has been for customers to become investors. As the public becomes the owner of great public service corporations there is an improvement in service and a gratifying diminution of prejudice against large concerns merely because of their size. This is a big country and its needs can be served best by big corporations, vigilantly regulated.

TAXING AMUSEMENTS.

The proprietors of theaters and amusement houses will attempt to have the internal revenue taxes on such establishments repealed in the coming Congress. They hold that if industrial corporations are to be relieved of Federal income taxes, theaters and places of amusement should be relieved also, because the tax on theater and playhouse tickets is passed on to the public.

When the 1926 revenue bill was being considered in committees the proprietors of the theaters and amusement places all over the country inaugurated a propaganda movement among the patrons of the theaters and amusement places of the cities, large and small, petitioning Congress to remove the 10 per cent tax on tickets. The result was that the members of the Senate and House committees were flooded with postal cards of protest coming into the committee rooms in number exceeding many millions.

The records of the internal revenue bureau show that since including 1915 and the first three months of this fiscal year the Treasury has collected more than $543,000,000 in taxes on theaters and amusement places of various sorts. The highest amount collected was $89,720,000 in 1921. The total collected in 1925 was only $30,907,000, and during the first three months of this fiscal year the theater and amusement collections were $3,327,000.

"FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE FARMER."

It was generally feared that the action of Congress in cutting off the appropriation for free seeds would result in separating the Department of Agriculture from the great body of farmers. Without the annual visit of the rural carrier with a choice assortment of the same old lettuce, corn and cabbage seed every year, how could the inhabitants along the rural delivery routes remember that Uncle Sam was still interested in his rural nephews?

Before the appropriation was eliminated from the agricultural bill, and the seed division lopped off from the plant industry bureau, eloquent and tearful pleas were wailed through the halls of Congress. The managers of the legislative program were urged to stay their hands. It was a sort of "woodman, spare that tree" appeal, but in vain. The seed division was abolished and the free-seed distribution is no more.

But leave it to the department to find a way to be useful to the bucolic section of the population. The scientists of that department are ever on the alert to discover some way of aiding the farmers. If there is any subject which fazes those devoted public servants at the outset it is morally certain that they will discover a means of overcoming the difficulty. Sometimes, however, it would appear that in their zeal to benefit the farmer they usurp the function of some other department. For instance, there has just been released an exceedingly long and profoundly erudite report in which the value of oil-burning heating plants is set forth in such simple terms that even a country schoolboy can understand that it is easier to start a fire in a furnace which is stoked with fuel oil than it is to start a fire in a coal-burning furnace. Also it is shown that there are several kinds of fuel oil, of which the heavier varieties are better than the more volatile. It is true that the department finds that from the standpoint of economy there is much to be said for coal. The reader is free to take his choice.

But what does it matter if two or three government agencies give out the same information? Each agency can show that it is addressing a different audience. The Department of Agriculture purposes to educate the farmer on oil fuel or any other old thing, no matter how many other departments, bureaus and commissions are specializing on the subject.

HOME WORK FOR CHILDREN.

It is not beyond the realm of reason to suppose that Cain and Abel, sons of Adam and Eve, had home work to do, for surely with two stalwart young ideas galloping around the garden of Eden Adam would have turned over to one the task of keeping his war club clean and ready, and Eve would not have assumed herself the entire responsibility of keeping her fig leaves pressed. If Marc Antony had a daughter, rumor has it that she was intrusted with the duty of keeping the toga spotless, and making certain that the goblets were at all times well polished and ready for immediate use, so she, too, had her regular tasks to perform. Abraham Lincoln as a young man split rails, did the chores, and studied at night by the light of a blazing hickory knot. Home work of one sort or another seems to have rather well-established precedents.

Now comes a lady from Fairhope, Ala., however, who feels that assigned home work and examinations for pupils under high school age are immoral, in that they make the child cheat, quarrel with his parents, lose sleep, and worry. The proposal has at least the merit of being along the line of modern thought regarding the upbringing of children. Surely it will gain the enthusiastic support not only of the younger generation, but also of the parents who find this generation hard to control and are anxious to take the easiest path, whatever it may be.

No doubt many children are overloaded by home studies and home work. It seems to be a growing fashion for school teachers to shift the task of instruction to parents, instead of doing it themselves. But if school teachers will look after the education of children, while parents see that the children learn discipline through performance of suitable work, there will be no danger of breaking down children's health.

BOBBED HAIR AND ST. PAUL.

The inevitable has happened: the question of the morality of bobbed hair has been referred back to St. Paul. The Rev. Dr. X. Fernhout, president of the Dutch Reformed Church Synod, has forbidden any hairdresser at Assen, Holland, to bob a woman's hair, an act which, relying on his interpretation of a passage in the first Epistle of St. Paul to the Corinthians, he describes as a sin.

It may be, of course, that the reverend gentleman allowed his zeal to outrun his discretion. If not, it is to be feared that there are in the world today a great many persons who must be officially categorized as sinners, but who, without this formidable ukase, would not otherwise deserve to be so listed. Still, that fact scarcely justifies the extravagant language of another clergyman who, disagreeing to cunctis with Dr. Fernhout, scouts the authority of the Apostle of the Gentiles on this subject and characterizes him as "a crabbed old widower," who "didn't know what he was talking about" and "knew nothing about women." These reproaches are certainly undeserved, for while there are many salient and striking features in the character of St. Paul, one of them unquestionably is the wide range of his knowledge of human nature in all its phases and manifestations. Nothing is to be gained and much harm may be done by such irreverent allusions to one of the really outstanding figures of the early Christian Church.

Temperance in discussion is to be highly commended. Dr. John Roach Straton's statement on the same up-to-date subject may be suitably appended as an illustration of what is meant. He said:

St. Paul did not extend his remarks to describing the fashion in which hair might be worn. There is nothing in his epistle which says hair must be long and not short. I have seen bobs which left a girl's head looking much like a man's—and we must keep the distinction clear, of course. But there are much more important matters relating to the Kingdom of God with which we might better concern ourselves.

The end is in sight. In a little while the cost of ammunition will take all the profit out of bootlegging.

It is probable that Congress will give early attention to the creation of additional "lame duck" sanctuaries.

PRESS COMMENT.

A Complicated Issue.

Philadelphia Record: The prohibition issue cut across party lines and complicated all the personal elements involved in the election. Justice Wagner might have been elected senator in New York merely because he was running on the ticket with the invincible Gov. Alfred Smith, but his candidacy was greatly assisted by the fact that a lot of Republican prohibitionists refused to vote for Senator Wadsworth, who stood no possibility of election, and whose candidacy could only cut into the Republican vote for senator. Everywhere the prohibition issue was complicated by considerations of party rivalry and personal popularity, so that it is difficult to assess the value of the sentiment for or against in any individual or local case.

Oh, Henry!

Baltimore Sun: Dr. Henry Van Dyke decries "the modern fashion of minimizing or blackening the fame of our great Americans." And yet how indignant that fashion is, for the forefathers' defender adds: "They were human, of course, and sometimes used strong language, indulged in convivial habits and were captivated by fair ladies." Dr. Van Dyke admits that, what space is left for the use of historical blacking as the most earnest advocates of equal rights for heroes understand it?

Cotton Speaks It.

Atlanta Constitution: The situation today is that cotton is selling for less than the cost of production through the hammerings of a group of hoarse, aided and abetted by government guesses that are in complete defiance of the actual ginning figures, and that were available at the time the last and most bearish of the government's guesses were made. It is unthinkable that a single member of Congress, certainly from the South, will decline to support the repeal of the law that created the crop estimate bureau.

Gestures of Friendship.

Brooklyn Citizen: Secretary of War Davis has received from Col. Noburo Morita, Japanese military attaché at Washington, the Japanese decoration conferred by the Emperor of Japan on the American aviators who made the round-the-world flight. The decorations will be awarded by the War Department to the first two of the aviators of these decorations was a gesture of friendship to America in addition to being a well-deserved honor to the intrepid aviators.

When Winter Comes.

Milwaukee Sentinel: When the north-west wind sweeps down over this garden spot of the universe the most thoughtless male adult becomes engrossed in meditation as to what he did with his last summer's wages; whether his intimate garments of wool will survive another winter, and whether his tailor will look favorably on a long-time arrangement for new overcoat construction.

Queens Free.

New York Evening Post: Queen Marie's presence on the Levathan, brought her a profit, even though she and her entourage were carried free. It's too bad there aren't more touring queens to make regular trips on American ships.

All a Mistake.

New York Evening World: Reading the publicity statements of the defendants and the prosecutor, we are persuaded that it was all a mistake about Hall having been murdered. He just might cold in an apple orchard and died.

Installment Buying.

Louisville Courier-Journal: Isn't some of the anxiety over the extension of installment buying due to the common fault of looking upon the people in a mass? It is not bulk goods and they are buying at retail, not wholesale. Overloading is a lesson both to the merchant and the customer. Wherein it is satisfactory, installment buying promotes sales and permits the purchaser to enjoy a comfort, convenience of even a luxury while he is in a mass.

Talkers and Listeners

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

THE Fathers did well when they guaranteed the freedom of the press. Freedom of the press imposes no obligation on the reader, nor does it in any way curtail his liberties. If a book or other publication offends or bores him, he may hurl it across the room or use it to kindle a fire. In neither case does he violate good manners, for the author is not present to be offended.

Freedom of speech is another matter. It gives one man freedom at another man's expense.

If the speaker is offensive and tiresome, the listener can only sit and suffer. He hurled a book across the room, but the law forbids him to do as much for an individual; he can not get up and walk away, for that would be rude; he can not so much as interrupt, lest he be guilty of ill manners.

This arrangement is patently unfair, and it results in a great deal of talk that is unnecessary, unprofitable and almost unbearable.

A decent respect for mankind forbids that any man do in public a thing he can't do well. If this rule were followed, there would be a considerable decrease in the vocal effort that now is called conversation.

Persons who talk glibly are many; persons whose talk can be accepted without a pinch of salt are relatively few. The best talker I know is the best free-hand liar I know.

And this is the why and the wherefore of it. People do not employ speech to conceal ideas, as the cynic said, nor do they, in the main, employ speech to impart ideas. They talk, for the most part, because they enjoy hearing themselves talk and because they enjoy holding the center of the stage. If there is a seat of vanity, it is near the end of the tongue.

In order to hold the center of the stage and continue in the privilege of hearing themselves talk, people must be entertaining. It so happens that the unembellished truth is less interesting to the ears of ordinary listeners than truth that is adorned with fancy and exaggerated to emphasize the high lights and the shadows.

Those who possess the gift of gab realize this, as though by instinct, seldom permit a want of exact information to hamper them. Once they have warmed to their work they manufacture detail and statistics, history and quotations as the need of the moment may require.

paying for it. If it isn't satisfactory, it teaches thrift. When a manufacturer suffers from the zeal of a "high pressure" agent, he is capable of learning, too. The total volume of installment business is made up of individual transactions.

To End an Argument.

Philadelphia Inquirer: Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia, says it would be difficult to get along without hell. Certainly it would. With hell out, how could a man end an argument snappily when he can't win with reason?

The Scratch Man.

Milwaukee Sentinel: The political race is not always to the swift, but sometimes it looks as if the fellow who can say "you're a liar" the most times in a given period and with the greatest rhetorical variation has a considerable edge.

Both Have Virtues.

Detroit News: "Spinach is good for the nerves," says a spinach fanatic. "Good for the digestion, good for the teeth and good for the complexion." And pie is good to eat.

The Marathon Titleholder.

Philadelphia Inquirer: Notwithstanding the upsets in almost every other form of sports the marathon titleholder retains his championship. "Al" Smith came through again in New York.

Spare the Thought.

Louisville Times: What we'd like to know is how gloomy Dean Inge would be if, in a moment of unexplainable weakness, he should bet on such tips as we've been weak enough to consider seriously.

Masterful Solution.

Philadelphia Record: At last a ray of hope pierces the gloom for the disgruntled farmers of the middle West. They may take comfort from a sympathetic pronouncement in their behalf by the American Bankers association. At its convention in Los Angeles that

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Work Women's Hours.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post is to be commended for urging organized labor to secure for women as short working hours as it has secured for men. But the editorial in which this good advice appears discusses the work week established by a law agreement and the work week imposed by labor laws for women as if they were alike in character. There are, of course, important differences. An 8-hour day or a 48-hour week established by an agreement is a basic work day or work week, with a higher rate of pay for overtime. An 8-hour day or a 48-hour week for women established by law is a maximum. Overtime is prohibited. Such a law (if enforced) prevents a woman from undertaking extra work and thus earning extra pay, even occasionally, regardless of her ability, desire or need. It deprives her of an opportunity open to her male fellow-worker. In a trade where work is irregular, it obviously makes her less desirable than a male worker.

Such laws, usually worded to apply to "women and minors," are favored by organized labor, but for themselves union men prefer the basic work day and work week, with "time and a half for overtime." When a "48-hour week" is referred to, it is obviously important to know what kind of a 48-hour week is meant. Before the general introduction of the typewriter the multi-graph or the electric light, even before the first telephone appeared at the centennial, "Edison's electric pen" was used in many commercial offices of the country, notably Dun's Mercantile Agency, in the production of their daily reports. But for nearly 60 years I have failed to see one of those implements, nor has any allusion ever been made to them. So far as I am aware, of the device which first made Edison's name known to the commercial world.

Perhaps some reader of The Post remembers the electric pen and some one may be able to tell the story of its rise and disappearance. Such a story would interest many of The Post's readers, I am sure.

OLD OVERSEER.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We read constantly of the inventions of that wizard, "Tom" Edison, but in all that has been printed concerning the sleep-scoring genius of Menlo Park I have never seen a word about the electric pen. Before the general introduction of the typewriter the multi-graph or the electric light, even before the first telephone appeared at the centennial, "Edison's electric pen" was used in many commercial offices of the country, notably Dun's Mercantile Agency, in the production of their daily reports. But for nearly 60 years I have failed to see one of those implements, nor has any allusion ever been made to them. So far as I am aware, of the device which first made Edison's name known to the commercial world.

INADEQUATE DEFENSE.
For some reason or other more official heed is paid in Washington to a comparatively small company of vociferous pacifists than to the great body of inarticulate American citizenship when it comes to shaping national defense policies, says the Minneapolis Tribune. What our enlightened voters ask for is a prudent economy in providing for land, sea and air forces, not a mere saving of money that invokes undue national hazards. They do not want "incomparably the greatest navy," or anything of that sort, but neither are they clamoring for what the ultra-pacifists have in mind.

The nation is at peace at home and with all other lands, so far as we are concerned, and the policy has been true of many and prolonged periods that came to a tragic and costly end. Where is the thoughtful man who can look over the world and convince himself that war is a thing of the past? Where is the prudent American who feels that this nation can go along henceforth with a complacent security against enemy assault? There is no such American qualifying as prudent. Defense, therefore, is a rational policy, and the policy is rational, according as defense is adequate to the case. Inadequate defense is rightly understood as profligacy, not economy.

WASH spinach and cook in a very little salted water, until tender. Drain dry and chop fine. Add two tablespoons of butter to the spinach, with one egg yolk and half a teaspoonful salt, ¼ teaspoonful each of pepper and paprika with a dash of nutmeg. Arrange on a well-greased platter, in alternate layers with fine minced ham, the spinach making the top layer. Scatter grated cheese and fine bread crumbs on top and place in the oven to brown delicately.

Cauliflower With Mushroom Sauce.

Tie in net or cheese cloth one head of cauliflower and boil in salt water about 25 minutes, or until tender, being careful not to let it fall apart. Take from the water and drain, using ¼ pound American cheese, grated, sprinkle over the cauliflower and set in a broiling oven until a nice brown.

Sauce—Have ready a sauce made from one tablespoonful of butter, one heaping tablespoonful of flour. Rub the butter and the flour together until creamy. Have the milk at the boiling point, with salt, pepper and a cup of chopped mushrooms added and let it thicken in a double boiler. Serve separate at table.

Deviled Shrimps.

One can shrimp, ½ cup mushrooms, ¼ cup canned tomatoes, ¼ cup canned cream, ½ cup cracker crumbs, 1 tablespoonful flour, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 tablespoonful chopped parsley, pepper and salt to taste. Directions—Melt 1 tablespoonful of butter and into this stir the flour, then add the tomato, cream, parsley, salt and pepper. Stir until a smooth paste is formed. Heat the shrimp and the mushrooms, cut fine in this sauce, and fill oysters cups with the mixture. Over the top spread cracker crumbs which have been mixed with the other tablespoonful of butter. Bake in a moderate oven until brown, serve with a sprig of parsley stuck in the center. If the shrimp are placed in vinegar for five minutes they will lose the fishy odor.

Tea Sandwiches.

Chop English walnuts and olives equal parts, and mix with ham ground very fine. Moisten the mixture with mayonnaise. Take thin slices of buttered bread, cover with lettuce leaves and place the mixture between.

Sardine Sandwiches.

Take one can of the very small, imported sardines, mash fine with two hard-boiled eggs, mix with mayonnaise until moist, serve between hot toast cut thin.

Tea Daisies.

Use one-half pound of butter thin crackers, spread with Philadelphia cream cheese, place salted almonds on the cheese, in the form of petals, place a raisin, piece of ginger or pineapple in the center.

Fig Loaf Cake.

1 cup shortening.
2 cups light brown sugar.
4 eggs.
3 cups flour.
2 teaspoonful baking powder.
¼ teaspoon salt.
1 cup coffee.
1 teaspoon cinnamon.
1 teaspoon nutmeg.

to guarantee that liberal representation of the people could vote without fear of molestation or reprisals. All but a few returned.

The vote showed that Adolfo Diaz had considerably more than two-thirds of the entire membership of the congress, even if all the liberals had been present. Under the circumstances the election is interpreted to represent an expression of the will of the freely elected representatives of the Nicaraguan people as provided for in the Central American pact.

Mexico Separate Problem.

There is nothing to indicate that the State Department is linking the Mexican problem with the Nicaraguan situation. The troubles of Mexico represent a problem separate and distinct. The religious phase of this problem was brought to the fore again yesterday by the speech of Senator Walsh, of Montana, in Philadelphia on Sunday, in which the senator expressed the opinion that the government of the United States should indicate to the Calles government its disapproval of the policy of expulsion pursued against the clergy.

The State Department records show that such disapproval has already been forcibly expressed. Whenever an American citizen has been involved there has been outright protest by Secretary Kellogg and such protests have brought immediate results. The nature of these protests has been sufficient to clearly show to Calles that the United States had no sympathy with his expulsion policy.

In the case of Father Krill, an American priest at Vera Cruz, protest against expulsion resulted in prompt yielding by Calles. Secretary Kellogg's expressed wish that he be not expelled. He returned to Vera Cruz.

In the case of Mother Semple, who was given the choice of leaving her school taken over or leaving the country, the United States government protested and Calles again yielded, though Mother Semple left the country of her own volition later.

In the case of Archbishop Curruana, papal legate who was a native of Porto Rico, expulsion resulted in prompt yielding by Calles.

Rico, the State Department had no time to officially protest because the archbishop left the country immediately. Dr. Phillips, a minister who taught in the primary school, was made the victim of Calles' antireligious policy until protest by the State Department caused the Mexican government to allow him to return.

Also in the case of five American Mormons, action by the State Department placed the United States squarely on record as disapproving of the Calles religious policy.

Unofficial reports of revolutionary activities in Mexico are being followed here, but so far there is nothing authoritative to indicate whether the Calles regime is in serious danger of collapse.

Killing of 9 Men Thought To Reveal Mexican Revolt

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 15 (By A. P.)—Plans for a revolutionary movement in northern Mexico are believed to have been partially revealed by the reported slaying of nine rebels by Federal troops in the state of Chihuahua.

Rumors that Gen. Nicholas Fernandez, former chief of staff for Gen. Francisco (Pancho) Villa, was one of the leaders of the proposed revolution have been denied by Gen. Ramon Lopez, commander of the Mexican federal garrison here. The reports credited Gen. Fernandez with leading a small detachment of heavily armed men into Mexico, November 1. This, it was said, was part of a scheme to mobilize thousands of Villa's followers who located on Chihuahua ranches when the bandit leader was slain.

Gen. Lopez admitted that detachments had been ordered to search for the rebel band. Last night he declared nine of the band had been killed. According to unofficial reports, and that Mr. Joseph P. Fournier, his chief of staff, was hunting for the others. He declined to state who was in command of the rebels.

Gen. Lopez scoffed reports that the rebels were planning a surprise attack on Juarez. It was persistently rumored that 700 men were ready to attack Juarez as soon as a five-day pay roll was received.

Why Chestnut Farms Milk Is Rated Highest by the D. C. Health Department.

What Actuates This Dairy's Leadership

IS IT just a spirit to excel? Or is it something deeper, closer to higher purpose? What do the executives of this dairy, in their private offices, look upon? Just four walls or thousands of trusting faces of Washington mothers and thousands of little children whose well-being is so much dependent on good milk? A sense of responsibility to the community health abides here, at Chestnut Farms Dairy. Into all the operations that maintain our milk's superior quality we look through the eyes of our patrons. What would we have us do to provide you with pure milk we do—and more, much more, for we have facilities created by science that aid us to obtain for Chestnut Farms Milk the highest rating by the District of Columbia Health Department.

SECOND LOVE

COPYRIGHT 1926 BY EUGENE MACLEAN

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.
Marcie Allen, beautiful and intelligent, has been married to "Champ" for two years. She is a friend of Audrey, Parrish's wealthy young wife, and is staying at her home. Parrish has left his wife, engaged at her coming on his poverty and her wealth. Morton, experienced with women, laughs at Marcie, but Parrish becomes interested in her. Marcie's course of free love is made harder by the arrival of Nona, celebrated stage dancer, who has loved Morton, and who also is Audrey's friend. As the last chapter ends, Marcie has come into Nona's room at Audrey's home, standing with her back to the door.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.
(Names and situations in this story are fictitious.)

CHAPTER XXXVII.

"WON'T you sit down?" Nona asked, cordially.
"No," said Marcie.
She looked fixedly at the other girl. "You're more beautiful than I thought you'd be," she said.
Nona smiled. "Thank you, dear."
"Don't thank me," snapped Marcie. "I hate you!"
Nona had been lying, half reclining on the couch, but now she sat upright.
"I say I hate you!" Marcie reiterated. "And I hate you more because you're like a—like a sleek panther."

Nona looked astonished, and then laughed. "Two other people in this house have said the same thing to me," she said. "So I must be a panther."
"A black one," Marcie went on, unpleasantly, "with your black hair and your—your siren eyes."
"Come over and sit down," invited Nona, "and tell me all about this."
"I won't sit down. But I'll tell you. You're after my man, and you can't have him."
"Mr. Morton?" inquired Nona.
"Yes, Harry Morton. I want him for myself. You had no business coming here. He told you what he thought of you—that time you asked him to marry you. She lifted her lip in a sneer. "If you had any self-respect you wouldn't come back!"

Nona was looking at her with absorbed interest. "Are you really in love with him?"
Marcie moved nearer to the girl on the couch.
"That's none of your business. But I came here because he's mine."
Nona sighed. "Ever since I've known that man it's been like this—women tearing out each other's hair over him. I wonder why?"
Marcie took another step forward. "Do you love him yourself?" she asked.

"Yes, I love him," answered the other, simply.
"You know why they pull hair over him," Marcie told her.
She started to say more, but a rap sounded on the door. She stepped back and opened it. Audrey stood outside.
"Do come downstairs and let Nona sleep," she said. "I heard voices in here, and thought I'd better intrude."

With her hand on Marcie's sleeve, she went naturally dragged her into the hall, and down the stairs. Marcie followed silently, without resistance.
"I'll bet you wanted to talk to her about daddy," she surmised.
Marcie silently verified the guess.
"Well," Audrey went on, "you'll have lots of chances to do that. Nona will be here all summer."
Her friend gave her a curious, swift side glance, but remained silent.
"We'll have lots of company, too—daddy says he wants to do some entertaining, and I'm to invite some friends from New York and Chicago to meet her. You'll love them."
"Women?" asked Marcie.
"And their husbands," Audrey said.
"I don't mind the husbands," Marcie stated, walking away.
She searched through the house, but Morton had gone. Too engrossed with her own problems to chat with Audrey, she put on her hat and getting her roadster, set forth on a leisurely drive through the streets.

A friend or two hailed her, and she waved back to them amiably enough, but kept on going. Out Sixteenth street she drove, and then over to the region where she and Parrish had fought, and then across the tree. She smiled briefly as she passed the spot. Her foot went down on the brake, and the car stopped. She looked at the tree, her brow furrowed in thought, and then turned back the way she had come.
Driving more rapidly, she proceeded down town, and pulled up before a hotel.

"Watch my car a moment, will you?" She asked the doorman, slipping a half dollar into his hand.

He bowed, and she went inside. At a telephone booth she called Parrish's office, and asked where mail might be forwarded to him. A clerk gave her the new address. Marcie came out, nodded to the doorman, and drove down Seventh street to a number that she kept repeating, half-audibly, to herself. The building was a small one, with the sign "Electrical Supplies" over the door.

Going inside, she asked for Parrish.
"That's the new bookkeeper, ain't it?" inquired the youth to whom she spoke. "He don't come until tomorrow."
Disappointed, Marcie turned away. "Do you know how I can reach him?" she asked, as an afterthought.
The youth smiled upon the pretty girl, and went into a tiny rear office. "He's staying at a hotel," he announced, returning. "Some just down town. Here's the phone number—he left it with the boss."

Half an hour later Marcie swept through the lobby of a dingy hotel, on a side street, and inquired at the desk for Parrish.
"Up in his room," said the clerk, jerking his thumb at the elevator. "Room 236."

Without hesitation, the girl entered the shaky lift, ascended to the second floor. The boy showed her how to find the room, and she knocked.
Parrish's voice, within, commanded her to enter.

She swung open the uneven, pine door, and stood looking at the man within. He jumped to his feet, astonished.
"Yes—it's Marcie," she said, entering. "Why did you run away from me in Philadelphia?"

He stood, nonplussed.
"Morton said you'd come back here," he explained. "That's why I came."
"Oh," she sank upon the edge of the bed. There was only one chair in the room, and Parrish was standing before it.
"Listen, John," she said. "You're not going to stay here in Washington, are you?"
"Yes, I've got a job here," he said. He was still standing.

Her voice took on a coaxing tone.
"But, honey boy, how can we see each other here? I've got to stay with Audrey—I can't go to my own home."
Parrish sat down. "I've been thinking, Marcie. If you and I ever are to get married, I've got to have everything clean and above board. I'll stay here until Audrey divorces—get rid of me. Then we can see each other."

Conduct and Common Sense

By ANNE SINGLETON

YOU can not teach your children manners too early. The sooner they recognize them as part of daily life, and not something to put on when company comes, the better. Good manners ought to be as natural and unconscious as breathing. There's nothing "high-brow" (that unpleasant expression for almost anything that is not common) there's nothing "high-brow" about good manners. Nobody should have any other kind. And yet many people who are awkward and rude in their own behavior, and rudeness by sneering at politeness.

I don't mean by politeness something rather insincere assumed to make an impression. I mean spontaneous kindness and courtesy properly expressed. Teach your children to get up when spoken to; to shake hands nicely; to come clean to table; to be tidy in their habits, not to interrupt the conversation of their elders; not to speak loudly or talk through their noses. Make your boy take off his cap to ladies. Make your girl answer questions with civility. Do not imagine that all the training you can give them will be too much. Children are not born into the world equipped with natural good manners. They are born full of the natural desire to satisfy their simple appetites and fight for anything they want. They arrive among us with all their little savage traits fully developed, and it is up to us to train them into civilized citizens.

You can tell at once whether a

She arose, and came to where he sat. "Don't you want to see me until then?" She leaned against his shoulder.
"Yes, I do," he said, honestly. "But we can meet on the street, or maybe take dinner together sometimes." His tone was hopeful.

Marcie gave a gesture of impatience. "That's no way to court a girl. Here's what you do, honey boy—you go away off some place, and in a day or two I'll follow. Then we can go to shows together, and everything—you won't have to be afraid."

Parrish looked up. "If we did that, Mr. Morton would show up again. He'd want to keep up apart." "Yes, he'd do that," she said, glancing curiously at his innocently upraised eyes. "But I can handle him."

He shook his head, in doubt. "I think you just want to get him away from Washington—because Nona's here," he surmised, more keenly than he realized.
"Nonsense—I just want my own Johnny boy," she said.
But after a few minutes more, she gave it up, and shrugging her shoulders, opened the door.

"You haven't even kissed me," she said.
"No—not in here," he said, looking around the shabby room. "You oughtn't to come here."
He followed her into the hall, and watched as she descended in the elevator.

The girl entered her machine again, and drove toward Audrey's house. Her eyes were clouded and angry, and she made the corners with vicious jerks at the steering wheel.
Once more in her own room, she threw herself face downward on the bed, and kicked and threshed about in a nervous rage. When finally she arose and looked at herself in the mirror, her nose was red, and her eyes puffed.

In haste, she repaired to the bathroom, and from the ice water faucet, wet a cloth with which to bathe her face.
As she was thus engaged, Nona rapped upon the door, and entered. "Well," demanded Marcie, inhospitably.

"I thought we'd better finish our talk, before Mr. Morton comes home," Nona suggested.
Marcie faced her, the light of resolution in her steady gaze.
"All right—we'll spill the news now," she came close to Nona. "You can't have Mr. Morton because—" she stopped for a venomous sniff—"Mr. Morton and I were secretly married day before yesterday."

New German Stamps Depict Noted Men

Berlin, Nov. 15 (By A. P.)—Monarchists are jubilant over the new series of postage stamps which for the first time in history bear pictures of prominent Germans.

With one exception the men picked out for the honor are heroes of German culture. Frederick the Great was selected for the 10-pennig stamp, the one most in use for internal communication.
Goethe, the world-famous genius, is pictured on the 25-pennig stamp which is the foreign letter postage fee. Among other great intellects represented are Schiller, Kant, Lessing, Leibnitz, Bach and Beethoven.

Prices realized on Swift Co. sales of carcasses beef in Washington, D. C., for week ending Saturday, November 13, 1926, on shipments sold out, ranged from 2.50 cents to 15.00 cents per pound and averaged 14.76 cents per pound.—Adv.

Mr. Work's Pointer On Auction Bridge

(Milton C. Work, the international authority, will answer your auction bridge questions. A stamped, self-addressed envelope must accompany each request for replies.)

Do not bid a No Trump if you have a blank suit or a worthless singleton.

BY that I mean size up your thirteen cards and be sure that a no trump is your wisest declaration in view of the distribution of your cards into suits. The ideal distribution for a no trump is 4-3-3-3; that is, four cards in one suit and three cards in each of the other three suits.
Yesterday I called a blank suit or a worthless singleton a no trump taboo; a red signal announcing such imminent and serious danger that it should stop the declaration from being made. Today I add two more distributional types which, while not bearers of a no trump, are a dangerous declaration to be made—if at all—only after careful consideration. These two dangerous distributions are worth while singletons and worthless two-card suits. For no trump purposes a "worth while singleton" is a singleton ace or king; a singleton queen is of doubtful value and any lower singleton is worthless. A queen with any other card makes a worth while doubleton; jack is of doubtful value and a doubleton containing no card as high as a jack is worthless. I will illustrate by citing some hands:

Spades: Ace. Hearts: Ace-x-x-x. Diamonds: Ace-x-x-x. Clubs: Ace-x-x-x. (our question hand of yesterday) is more doubtful, but the singleton king is worth while; the hand is too strong to pass, and it has no attractive suit-bid. So the process of elimination makes a no-trump the best declaration.

With a 4-4-3-3 division of the suits, there are many hands which are sound no trumps, even when the two-card suit is headed by a spot card, and consequently "worthless."
Spades: 3-2. Hearts: Ace-king-jack. Diamonds: King-jack-9-4. Clubs: Queen-jack-9-5. is amply strong enough to bid no trump in spite of the spade menace, but with a fair five-card suit or a strong four-card suit, a worthless doubleton should steer the declaration from the no trump to the major suit, especially if it be a major. Such hands as:

Spades: Queen-10-x-x-x. Hearts: Ace-king-x. Diamonds: Ace-queen-10. Clubs: x-x, and spades: Ace-king-jack-x. Hearts: Ace-king-x. Diamonds: King-jack-9-4. Clubs: x-x, are much better played than no trump bids.

Spades: x-x. Hearts: King-x. Diamonds: Ace-king-x-x-x. Clubs: Ace-x-x-x. one diamond is a better bid than no trump. In addition to a worthless doubleton, the hand contains one other "thin" suit for a no trump; so a suit-bid is wiser.

Now here is another type of dealer's hand; how should it be declared? Spades: x-x-x. Hearts: Ace-x-x-x. Diamonds: King-x-x. Clubs: Queen-jack-x. Answer tomorrow.

Special to The Washington Post. Olympia, Wash., Nov. 15.—No more will Pullman porters tug at bedcovers to awaken passengers for late breakfasts and the time-worn raucous calls are eliminated in the newer order of things. Following the Southern Pacific, other Western railroads are equipping their sleeping cars with soft music chimes to lure passengers from sleep and to the dining compartments. At periods of five minutes each chime will ring out first, second and last call for seats in the buffet cars, a set of the bells having been installed in each Pullman coach.

Further, the Southern Pacific trains between Seattle and Los Angeles the chimes are winning much applause and comment from travelers.

NOW, why is Beatrice all dressed up? Her friends think it's because she's a little peacock. Her teacher thinks she must be going to a party afterward and be saving time—unwisely. But Beatrice herself knows a bit mournfully, that she's just "wearing it out." And of all the unbecoming procedures, this is the worst. For that dress would have made the janitor's daughter happy all winter.

Of course, it was a mistake to begin with—much too tussy even for a party, because dear Miss Smithers, the seamstress, combined what she thought the good points of three different sketches—and then she made the dress in bright blue crepe, which wasn't becoming any way. The lace blouse was all wrong, especially the sleeves. The roman-striped girdle was an old thing Aunt Elsie had. And the high-heeled patent leather slippers were the cream of the jest of which the poor child was the victim.

Susan—at the left—is just right for school. A pleated skirt of blue serge—a blouse of white English madras—stockings of grayish brown woolen mixture—plain brown shoes. Even her hair is better arranged than Beatrice's too insistent locks. And yet Beatrice's mother wonders why her child doesn't love school.

JUST FOLKS

A WORD FROM XANTHIPPE. It's all very well for philosophers wise.

The value of money to scorn and despise, But while Mr. Socrates talked through the day Xanthippe, his wife, had a few things to say.

And she'd rather have lived on a workman's wage Than have starved as the wife of an indolent sage.

They say that Xanthippe was shrewish and stern And she nagged the old man till his cheeks used to burn. As he sat with his friends she would come in and shout: "Every one of you loafers get up and get out!"

And Socrates said, as his shoulders he'd jerk, "Don't mind the old girl! She just wants me to work."

They've given Xanthippe a harsh name to bear, While Socrates now has a crown he can wear. But I venture to say it's not much of a life

When a woman must be a philosopher's wife. I am certain an angel from Heaven would balk Were she tied to a man who did nothing but talk.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

NEW LIGHT ON MILK SICKNESS. D. R. W. E. WALSH contributes two or three points about milk sickness.

At least they were new to me. One is that a person with milk sickness inhales a sweetish odor similar to that of diabetes in coma. He relates his experience in suspecting milk sickness from this odor and later confirming the suspected diagnosis by further tests and investigations. Another is that tests of the urine show the presence there of the same odoriferous chemicals. In one case there seemed no other reason to suspect milk sickness. The cows supplying milk were all right. The nearby pastures contained none of the weed white snakeroot. Dr. Walsh was baffled until he investigated the butter used by the patient. This came from a neighborhood in which there was snakeroot in the pastures. Further investigation showed that some of the cows on the farm where this butter was produced had had milk sickness.

Dr. Walsh's theory is that milk sickness causes a very extensive breaking down of the tissues of certain important organs. As a result the animals and men suspected develop an acidosis and this acidosis is responsible for the sweetish odor.

Another fact which was new to me was that after a person had had milk sickness and apparently recovered, he must take life very easy. It appears that the organs, weakened and broken down by the attack, can do their work fairly well under light strain. But if the strain is increased he will, or otherwise, these vital organs may go on strike.

Dr. Walsh tells of a child, who, having recovered from milk sickness, went back to school. As a result she became unconscious and died. A man thought he was convalescent and walked four miles to see a doctor. He became unconscious and died the next day.

Another point which was new to me was the treatment which Dr. Walsh proposes. He gives bicarbonate of soda by mouth and by injection in full doses. In proper cases insulin may be injected. Injections of insulin also act like magic in the coma of diabetes. It is also of service in the acidosis caused by milk sickness. Injections of sugar solution are used on the same theory.

The possible danger of milk sickness due to eating butter from cows with milk sickness was new to me. It is not easy to keep in touch with the sources of butter.

BEAUTY AND YOU

By VIOLA PARIS

ONE of the greatest of all beautifiers, and one that is a free gift available to every one, is sleep. We are so accustomed to sleep as a part of our daily lives that we have ceased to regard it with wonder and respect. But, if you will stop to think about it, I am sure that you will agree with me that this dropping into oblivion and awakening later with renewed vitality is one of the great miracles of nature.

It isn't worth while to neglect the health giving hour of sleep—not for any sort of tempting good times, which are, after all, fleeting affairs. It is important, too, to go to bed fairly early and to rise fairly early.

During these hours of recuperation, the blood stream courses through the brain, the muscular cells, and all the various organs of the body. Thus the fatigue toxins that we have accumulated during the day are all washed away, and so awoken refreshed and ready for new activities.

The average woman needs not less than eight hours of sleep each night. Many require more—nine won't do any harm. But rarely do we need more than nine hours of sleep. Indeed, too much sleep can have a bad effect, because it suppresses forces that are seeking activity as their natural outlet.

When you awaken in the morning, if it is at all near a reasonable hour, that is the time to get up. Don't lie lazily about, wasting the finest hours of the day. Don't take naps again—they will only make you feel heavy and dull.

Suppose you do wake up a half hour ahead of time. Why not spend that 30 minutes taking some practicing exercises—not too far removed from an open window? You won't regret it, for you are sure to feel better and more full of "pep" the whole day through.

It is called "KOTEX." Ends the insecurity of the old-time sanitary pad. Five times as absorbent! And deodorizes—ends ALL fear of offending.

✓ As easily disposed of as a piece of tissue. No laundry. No embarrassment.

What's What in the New Decolletages

Fashion-keen Mitzi has discovered some fascinating new ideas—and her brief sketches might have been drawn from these very frocks—

The Vee, both back and front, is charmingly shown on a French frock, of beads, one might say—so lavish is it in its use of tiny glistening crystal beads on net—$185.

The new scoop decolletage—as Mitzi sees it, has a straight sort of vestee of the sheer crepe, outlined by a deep Vee of paillettes—the frock of white crepe georgette, $100.

Both round and Vee is the decolletage of another exquisite frock in rose-pink crepe Roma—with strappings of rhinestones, and a glorious rhinestone buckle to clasp the gathered front—$65.

MODISH MITZI

Dad has a few matters to finish before he takes his daughter out to lunch. Mitzi at Dad's office is amusing herself sketching some of the things she saw in the shop. Her very high-crowned, black felt hat is trimmed with ribbon.

Mitzi Draws a Line or Two for the New Decolletages

Dad thought they were business papers. He doesn't know how to explain it, but they are on his desk. He doesn't know that the sketch is of the very low V-shaped decolletage gown that Mitzi saw in the shop this morning. V both back and front is equally smart.

Who is it? Or better still, what is it? His masculine eye fails to detect the new scoop decolletage. It has a straight sort of a vestee. To Dad it looks like a lady in a very low-cut evening gown.

Mitzi forgot something. Oh, there it is. The sketch Dad is holding is most important of all. It has a new, pointed and cut-out back. They are the sketches she is going to give her dressmaker. "Nice things to find in a business office," grumbles Dad, and in his "out" basket, too.

STEEL AGAIN LEADER

IN NEW BULLISH MOVE

Stock List, as a Whole, Gains Ground, Though Trading Is Rather Quiet.

FEW RAILS FEATURED

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, Nov. 13.—Higher dividends and renewed expectations of an announcement on Standard Oil of New Jersey financing, following the close of the market, probably engendered more bullish enthusiasm than the advance in the call-money rate could destroy, and the stock list as a whole gained ground in today's session on the New York Stock Exchange. Trading was rather dull, with sentiment cheerful in speculative circles.

However, public participation seemed to be almost negligible. Several issues were pushed rather hard by professionals in one direction or the other. There were numerous gains on the day of 2 to 4 1/2 points and also many losses of substantial proportions, but the gains were in the majority.

United States Steel common was an outstanding feature, advancing 15 1/2, a new high for the movement and lengthening its lead over General Motors when Steel was about the only stock in the list that was moving forward, but during most of the day it received some encouragement from new low-priced motor stocks, several of the tobaccos and most of the equipments.

General Motors, sluggish during several previous sessions, again lagged behind, leading support to the rumors that speculation for the decline are using it as their central target. Some strength appeared in the stock in the last hour and it closed at 147 1/2 on the day up 1 1/2 points.

The most important gainers on the day included Hudson Motors, Chrysler, Reynolds Tobacco, Bayou Cigars, American and Baldwin Locomotives, American Agricultural Chemicals, preferred Beech-nut Packing, Byers, By-Products, Cokes, Commercial Solvents B, Greene Cananea Copper, Pullman, Timken, Union Carbide, United Cigar Stores and Warner Bros.

Railroad stocks were featured by advances in Rock Island, which reached a new high for the year; Atchafalaya, Pacific Coast, and Chicago and North Western.

Gimbel shares sold at the lowest prices listing on the stock exchange. The strength in Steel caused renewed discussion of the dividend situation. The latest theory around the street was that a series of large extra cash dividends would probably be found among the plans of the management for next year.

Despite heavy profit taking at intervals, the equipment shares as a group displayed a distinctly strong tone. Sterling was stronger on optimistic reports about the upward trend of the cost strike, the French franc gained about 5 points, and most other rates were firm, though less than finished from 1 to 3 points down.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Chicago, Nov. 13 (By A. P.).—Despite 1,195,000 bushels increase of the United States visible supply, wheat values showed an upward trend of the time today. Argentine advances pointed to likelihood of smaller yields of wheat than had been expected throughout a large area. Closing quotations on wheat were firm 1/4 to 1/2 cent net higher, corn 1/2 to 1/4 cents up, oats, at 1/4 to 1/2 cent advance, and provisions unchanged to 7 cent down.

According to some reports current here today, cutting of wheat in northern Argentina, where conditions are serious damage done by frost and drought.

It was estimated by one authority that the crop losses in south Cordoba and Pampas southwest would amount to 40 per cent of the total area of Pampas together contain nearly one-half of the total wheat acreage of Argentina. Argentine wheat returns have been estimated by one authority to be about 30,000,000 bushels more than last year and that Canadian wheat is being marketed faster than last year.

Corn displayed independent strength from start to finish. Rainy weather restrained sellers, who had been pushing unfavorable for curing the new crop and for the movement of corn from the interior. Besides, special attention was given to a statement that the government report of the crop of corn for this season is the smallest since 1914. Poor looking, except today from Illinois points and small areas of corn, also were subject of notice. Oats followed corn. Provisions sagged on account of a bulge due to better cash demand for lard.

G. U. Perfects Grid Leaders Passes for Fordham

Coach Little Equips Team With Varied Aerial Attack.

Tall New York Backs Present Problem to Hilltoppers.

By JACK ESPY.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15 (By A. P.).—That's what Coach Lou Little's Georgetown university football team faces this Saturday in the game with its old rival, Fordham, at the Polo grounds.

There seems to be no end to the trouble that Georgetown has met all season. With its secondary defense handicapped by lack of height, the Blue and Gray has encountered a shower of forward passes every game. The two defeats were brought about by aerials, and now Fordham stands before the Hilltop machine and challenges it to another duel with the overhead weapon.

It would be all right if Georgetown's games were decided on the merits of the forward pass offense, because Coach Little has given the Hilltoppers just as fine an aerial attack as any team in the country boasts. He has a strong passer in Bob Nork and sure receivers in Frank McGrath and Carl White, and so can match almost any rival team when it comes to advancing via the heave.

But Fordham has, just like West Virginia and Navy, tall receivers, who undoubtedly will give Georgetown's small backs all kinds of trouble, and, of course, such an advantage in height is going to aid Fordham's chances for success with its passes.

Leary and Delaney are the New Yorkers' towering pass snatchers. They have played prominent roles in the Maroon's victories this season. Besides being taller than any of Georgetown's secondary group, this pair handle the ball as though it were just a kid's marble, which practically assures Fordham of gaining when they as much as get their fingers on the leather.

Yet Coach Little is still trying to perfect a forward pass defense for his charges that will be able to offset the disadvantage. He does not fear Fordham's overhead attack and believes that his men will stop it. Meanwhile, he is unfolding new pass plays to them to add to an already large repertoire which he calculates will give Fordham plenty of reason to groan.

Escaping serious injuries in the Navy clash, the Hilltoppers yesterday went through a long drill on these new plays. Only Jerry Thompson, the speedy half-back, was absent, due to a bruised leg. But he is expected to practice today and should be in fine shape to face the Maroon.

The varsity will not be given scrimmage, but will have much work in other lines before the trip is made to New York. Scrimmages have been ordered for the reserves, however, and they will be conditioned to take part against Fordham if they are required.

The squad will leave Washington Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock, accompanied by the coaching staff, members of the faculty and probably several hundred students. Many of Georgetown's students are natives of the New York region, and it will be a visit home for them. The Hotel McAlpin will be the headquarters of the players in New York.

Grid Leaders In 2 Games Saturday

Lafayette to Engage Lehigh; N. Y. U. to Meet Nebraska.

Harvard-Yale Battle Draws Interest on Eastern Front.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15 (By A. P.).—Two of the East's four unbeaten and untied college football teams will strike their final blows on the gridiron next Saturday, one with prospects of an easy triumph over a foe of long standing, the other with a drive into the West for its first major intersectional battle on foreign ground.

Lafayette, victor in eight straight games, apparently has little to fear from Lehigh, although the embattled Bethlehem, Pa., warriors finally emerged from their long losing streak last Saturday by defeating Rutgers, 14 to 0. But the Nebraska cornhuskers loom as a formidable threat to New York university's unblemished record, and the Gotham team's forward line is expected to receive its greatest test in the clash of the teams at Lincoln, Neb.

Critics today pointed to the N. Y. U. front row as one of the most powerful in the country. The team's defensive record yields only to that of Notre Dame, of ten points scored against the Violet eleven, seven resulted from a lone touchdown by West Virginia Wesleyan and three from a drop-kick by Fordham. Six other eleven have been shut out by N. Y. U.

A light schedule of games, topped by Yale's annual struggle against Harvard at New Haven, will offer only minor opposition for other leaders in the fight for Eastern supremacy. Brown and Navy, sharing unbeaten and untied records, look for comparatively easy games, the Middles having scheduled Loyola as a tune-up tilt for the Army struggle one week hence.

The Bruins likewise accept a skirmish with New Hampshire largely as a preparatory contest for their fallwell battle on Thanksgiving day against Colgate, Holy Cross, Army, Boston College and Syracuse, also have light opposition, facing Boston university, Ursinus, Gettysburg and Niagara, respectively.

Aside from the Yale-Harvard game, the Fordham-Georgetown clash here appeared to offer the only prospect of a hard-fought battle.

Although Georgetown is conceded a distinct edge on the basis of its brilliant play against Syracuse yesterday, the Metropolitan eleven has taken confidence since its tie with Holy Cross and its success in holding N. Y. U. scoreless for three periods.

Eight major eleven will rest as a result of important games on Thanksgiving day. Pennsylvania and Cornell, Pittsburgh and Penn State, clashing in holiday conflicts, will be idle.

West Virginia meets Carnegie Tech Saturday and Washington and Jefferson on the holiday.

Columbia and Colgate also will not be seen in action until Thursday of next week, when they will oppose Syracuse and Brown, respectively.

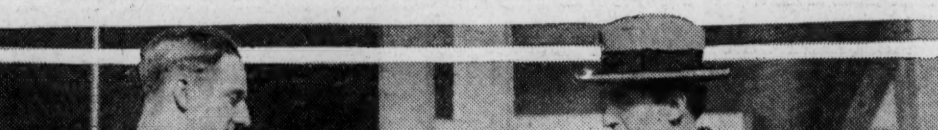

ARROW CAGERS PLAY.

The Arrow senior five will take on the Live Wires tonight at 8 o'clock in the Eastern High gymnasium. Teams having courts may get games by calling Manager Palmer at Franklin 9923.

REX VICTORIOUS.

The Rex Peevies ran up a 30-to-0 score in a game with the Silwath eleven yesterday. Dan McKenna and Buck Miller were the outstanding players for the Rex club.

CEREMONIES ATTEND OPENING OF BOWIE RACE MEET

As a result of the marks of Locke and Paddock, while they go on the books officially as American standards, face likely disapproval when they are submitted to the I. A. A. F. for recognition as world's records.

All told, the convention today ratified an array of 159 American record performances, 35 in track and field and 124 in swimming, out of an original list of 217 applications. The most conspicuous records falling of approval were the pole-vault marks of the Norwegian star, Chariing Hoff, who has turned professional and sued officials of the A. A. U. on charges of conspiracy growing out of the cancellation of his American tour while he was in Los Angeles.

Paddock, who had bids for two other records, at 125 and 150 yards, rejected because better marks already are on the books to his own credit, also had his amateur status under question during the day. This resulted from the use of his name and photographs of him in connection with an advertisement for gasoline in a Sacramento (Calif.) newspaper. The registration committee put the matter in the hands of Robert S. Weaver, of Los Angeles, for investigation.

Two other outdoor track and field records approved were the 100-yard relay mark of the United States, set by the Boston A. A. A. at Philadelphia last July, also constituting a world's record, and the pole vault mark of 13 feet 5 1/8 inch made by Lee Barnes at Los Angeles in February.

Among the swimmers Agnes Geraghty, breast-stroke star of the Women's Swimming Association of New York, led the record breakers with nineteen new marks placed to her credit. Arne Borg, Swedish performer who wore the colors of the Illinois A. C. in the United States, was credited with fifteen, and John W. Swann, of clubmate, with thirteen. Ethel Lackie and Sybil Bauer, both of the I. A. C., gained eight and five records, respectively.

Erich Rademacher, German breast-stroke star, received credit for seven marks at his specialty.

The slate of awards of 1927's A. A. U. national championships went through without a hitch except in the case of the national senior indoor women's swimming title events, which were voted to the Buffalo Athletic club over the objection of a majority of the swimming committee, which held that the Buffalo bid was insufficient.

The other major national championship awards ratified included:

Senior and junior track and field, New Orleans, July 1, 2 and 3; senior indoor track and field, Detroit, February 26 or March 5; women's outdoor track and field, Pasadena, Calif.; marathon, Be 'on; 15-mile run, St. Louis.

Senior cross-country 10-mile run, 7-mile walk, steeplechase and pentathlon, New York; wrestling, Iowa State college, Ames, March 24, 25 and 26; senior boxing, Boston; junior boxing, Cincinnati; senior men's outdoor swimming, Hawaii; senior women's outdoor swimming, New York; senior indoor men's swimming, Illinois A. C.; Relection of Murray Hulbert, of New York, tomorrow for a third term as president of the A. A. U., appeared slated as a result of a caucus of delegates tonight. Earlier booms for Judge Rufus E. Foster, of New Orleans, and Charles D. Lynch, of Detroit, apparently had subsided.

A lively contest between Buffalo and Cincinnati for the 1927 convention also has developed with the odds apparently in favor of Buffalo's election.

Abd-el Kebir, Moroccan middleweight, won the decision over Julius Weiss, of Germany, after ten rounds of hard milling. Kebir weighed 161 and Weiss 164.

Dash Record Of Paddock Ratified

9 1/2 Seconds Accepted as New Time for 100-Yd. Distance.

Tenth-second Watches Discarded; Foreign Opposition Seen.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 15 (By A. P.).—The Amateur Athletic Union, in annual convention today, ratified the world's record-smashing performance of Charles Paddock for 100 yards and of Roland Locke, University of Nebraska star, for 220 yards, but closed the door to acceptance of further records timed by tenth-second watches.

The expected fight over acceptance of the records themselves, 9 1/2 seconds for the century by Paddock, and 20 5/10 for the furlong by Locke, failed to materialize. Both were ratified without objection but it was only after spirited debate that the convention voted to taboo, after next January 1, the type of watches that registers these performances and readout as official fifth-second time pieces.

There are international complications to this battle of split second. The International Amateur Athletic federation has gone on record, after making tests, as holding the tenth-second watch to be inaccurate. It was this attitude that prompted the decision of the A. A. U.

As a result of the marks of Locke and Paddock, while they go on the books officially as American standards, face likely disapproval when they are submitted to the I. A. A. F. for recognition as world's records.

Tigers List Ohio State To Replace Harvard

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 15 (By A. P.).—Ohio State replaced Harvard on the Princeton football schedule for next fall, it became known tonight, when the board of athletic control, announced the dates of the season's games. Cornell, with whom Princeton signed a three-year contract, supplanted Navy and William & Mary was substituted for Swarthmore.

All of next year's games will be played at Princeton with the exception of the Yale contest, which is scheduled for New Haven.

Dallas Club Awarded P. G. A. Title Event

After delegates from 22 districts had voted to stage the title fixture next fall at the Westchester country club, of Dallas, Tex., Alex. Pirie, of Chicago, was elected to succeed George Sargent, of Columbus, Ohio, as head of the association. Sargent's retirement after six years as president was accompanied by presentation to him of a platinum watch.

Willie Ogg, of Worcester, Mass.; W. H. Hay, of Cleveland, and Neil Chrichton, of Yakima, Wash., were chosen vice presidents. Ernest Anderson was reelected secretary-treasurer.

Poker Raid May Cost Nebraska 2 Grid Stars

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 15 (By A. P.).—Roy McNary, a star end and John "Jug" Brown, backfield star of the University of Nebraska football team were arrested early today together with six other students in a raid in what the police said was a poker game. McNary is a special police officer whose duty it is to enforce the city curfew law.

University officials said today that if the men are convicted they will be suspended from school immediately regardless of their value to the team.

The hearing was set for Saturday morning. Both McNary and Brown are scheduled to go into the fray with New York University here Saturday and are listed to leave with the team Saturday night for Seattle to play the University of Washington Thanksgiving day.

Tunney May Officiate In Game Here Saturday

Just how Gene Tunney, world's heavyweight champion, feels toward his old playmates, the United States marines, will be learned today after James Joseph receives a telegram from the Secretary of the Navy, Curtis D. Wilbur, requesting him to appear next Saturday at the annual football clash between Fort Benning and Quantico in the Catholic university stadium.

Late last night Secretary Wilbur and Maj. Gen. John A. Lejeune, commander of the marine corps, each without the other's knowledge dispatched invitations to Tunney. By way of adding a dash of color to the battle for the President's cup, they sought the new title champion as one of the lineups. Tunney's reply is expected today.

Decision Won By Former Sailor

Negro Carries Only 2 Rounds in Bout for Championship.

Featherweight Contenders Engage in Bloody Battle.

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 15.—Dick "Honeyboy" Finnegan, of Dorchester, his face and body covered with blood the last five rounds, was awarded the decision and the unofficial world's featherweight title at the Boston arena tonight over Chick Suggs, game little fighting negro, from New Bedford, in a ten-round battle. More than 15,000 fans watched the fight. Finnegan's most of the time, and one of the best battles seen here in many moons. His split lip, a purse of $20,000, and Finnegan, the former sailor was awarded a belt by the Suffolk Athletic association, emblematic of the world championship.

Finnegan weighed in at 125 1/2, having had some difficulty in the process, and there was some question as to how he would stand this. He was in the pink of condition, however, when the fight started, as was Suggs, who weighed in at 125. Finnegan was accompanied by a band and a large following of rooters from his Dorchester home, and was received with wild applause when he entered the ring in the newly remodeled arena.

Suggs, too, who had a large following of fans, black and white, was warmly greeted as he entered after "Honeyboy," but the welcome was not as enthusiastic as that accorded his victor.

"Honeyboy" Finnegan, with his $12,000 share of the proceeds and his $1000 belt, will be asked to defend his title here within 90 days. The decision was given by referee Jim Walsh was well received by the fans.

Finnegan stands accredited with seven out of the ten rounds. One was even over by referee Jim Walsh, while Suggs counted on his right, and had his reach been longer, he lacked 2 inches of Finnegan's 68, it might have proved more effective.

In the sixth round, perhaps the hardest of them all, Suggs opened a terrible cut over Finnegan's right eye, and from then on despite all his second could do with Suggs pounding at it twice more, Finnegan was a mass of red, white and blue. In the ninth round Finnegan landed a right in the time belt in his right eye, but dealing out powerful and certain blows all the same.

He knocked Suggs all over the ring constantly. In the ninth, right on the opening, he sent the black boy to the floor with the blow of 1, and had the battle lasted a few rounds more, with his opponent of the Yale foot, he would have scored a knockout.

Finnegan was the aggressor throughout. Even in the sixth, when "Honey Boy" looked as if some one had poured can of red paint over him, he was the better of the two. In this round after his eye had been opened, he clinched, and both fell to the floor in the tenth he nearly knocked Suggs out.

Promoters of the fight were authorized by the Massachusetts boxing commission to advertise the bout as for the world's featherweight championship, recently relinquished by "Kid" Kaplan, of New Bedford, who became unable to make the weight in his class.

The New York boxing commission last week approved the Finnegan-Suggs fight, and suggested that the winner meet the victor of the Red Chapman-Benny Bass bout, which is to be staged at a date not yet named, for the world's championship.

Lew Mayrs Outpoints Cecconi in 12 Rounds

Baltimore, Nov. 15 (By A. P.).—Lew Mayrs, Baltimore lightweight, won over Johnny Cecconi, of Scranton, Pa., after a 12-round bout here tonight. But Nolan, of Westchester, of St. Louis, knocked out Lewis Spagnola.

Holy Name Smoker Is Featured by Bouts

An interesting boxing program presented by Frankie Mann featured the Holy Name society's smoker last night. Mary Gullen, who is being tutored for a scrap with Henry Lamar, supplied the main attraction.

Mary's first opponent was one dusky Percy Palmer, who at one time was sparring partner to Tiger Flowers. However, Mary put the blushing touch to Palmer in the first round, with a right to the chin, and then Teddy Brennan stepped in for two more rounds.

The semifinal was furnished by the Bowen brothers, Andy and Cliff, who boxed three sizing rounds. Two tiny tots, Billy Mitchell and Young Toby, opened the smoker and the youngsters lost no time in starting, for they went at it tooth and nail.

Jack Cafoni and Jimmy Gardner were principals in another three-rounder which the former won with plenty to spare. The bouts between Joe Dillon and Billy Dixon, and Gypse Smith and Larry Back ended all even. Bill Walter, of the Post sports staff, refereed all the bouts.

G. U. AND NAVY GAME IN '27 POSSIBLE

Advices That Hilltop Would Be Dropped Are Premature.

ANAPOLIS, Nov. 15.—Commander Ingram, director of athletics, at the Naval Academy, states that the announcement that Georgetown would play the Hilltoppers in 1927, is premature. By the schedule next season is premature. By the splendid playing of the Hilltoppers here Saturday, they surely earned recognition for a game in 1927, Ingram declared. He added that the principal question is whether the Middles could undertake a more pretentious schedule than has marked this season's campaign.

Michigan, Notre Dame, and Pennsylvania, have already been booked, and with Army, make up a quartet of heavy engagements. This leaves four alternate dates in the schedule, whether it will be good policy to take on another team of the calibre of the Blue and Gray, has yet to be determined.

The Middles are now confining all of their efforts toward preparations for the big service game "Army" has a great team; don't forget that. In spite of its defeat by Notre Dame, and Navy has its work well out for the service clash at Chicago on November 27."

In these words, Commander Ingram sized up the enemy, in discussing the Army-Notre Dame game played at the Yankee stadium, New York, on Saturday. He, together with assistant coaches, Lieut. Johnny Beckett, formerly of the United States Marines, and "Bip" Miller, formerly of Notre Dame, scouted the Cadets in that battle. Beckett and Miller shared the views of Ingram as to the formidable Cadet combination.

The Middy regulars, who played against Georgetown, were given a lay-off from practice today, but the rest of the squad took up the usual drive against the shock troops of squad B. The big team, however, will resume activities in full blast tomorrow. Just one week remains for the final polishing off on home grounds, as the movement to Chicago is booked for Wednesday of next week. The regiment will get away on Thanksgiving day.

Palace Pros Better Fortified For League Season, Says Star

By "RUSTY" SAUNDERS.
Leading High Point Scorer American Basketball League.

WHEN the American league season opens in Washington, the Washington team is going to step out and do the best it can to bring the professional championship to this city.

We've got one of the fastest and most accurate clubs in the league this year, and expect to win the chance to play for the title by leading the other teams in at least one of the two halves scheduled. This will not be easy, since all the league clubs have been materially strengthened since last year.

Our two strongest rivals ought to be Philadelphia and Cleveland. The Philadelphia five is a newcomer to the league, but they beat us twice last year, when carrying the colors of the South Philadelphia Hebrew association. Others who fell before them were the original Celtics—three games—and the Brooklyn and Port Wayne teams of the American league.

Cleveland, winner of the championship last year, has been training for two weeks just like the Washington club. We led them in the first half last year, but missed winning by trailing Brooklyn one

George Glasco, who holds down the other forward position (Saunders is a forward), stood sixth in scoring. When the four of us get working smoothly together, then the Washington club should be able to forge ahead as quickly as is necessary.

At present the center position is undecided in Ray Kennedy's mind. We have three men of almost equal caliber in the squad, every one of whom probably will be kept with the club. They are Eddie Miller, from Chicago, Ill.; "Jazz" Chazmad, of Elizabeth, N. J.; and Sam Segal, of Buffalo, N. Y.

Every one of them is taller than 6 feet, and has lots of fight. Their styles of play are all different, and it seems to be just a matter of determining which style will fit in best with Ray Kennedy's tactics.

Miller is a velvety sort of player, easing in and out of scrimmage and always sticking close to his man. He is tall and lanky. Chazmad is one of the best built men on the squad, and his play is aggressive from start to finish. Segal has a change of pace which is deceptive, and is the surest shot of the three.

McTigue Knocks Out Vidabeck in Round 3

New York, Nov. 15 (By A. P.).—Mike McGuire, former light-heavyweight champion, knocked out Billy Vidabeck, 24, a junior boxer, in the third round of a ten-round match here tonight. BULLETIN WINS FOR BEDWELLS AS WIE MEET OPENS

$7,500 Stake Is Decided At Wire

Celidon, of Rancocas Stable, Almost Gets Up to Triumph.

Backbone and Harry Baker Also Score in Good Going.

(Special to The Washington Post.)

BOWIE, Md., Nov. 15.—Racing returned to Bowie this afternoon for the twenty-day season that will mark the Eastern finale for 1926, and Guy Bedwell celebrated the occasion by annexing the 7-furlong Purse Handicap. It was a great day for Maryland when Bulletin earned a head decision over the Rancocas stable's Celidon in the state fixture as the Bedwells stable has a big following in this section.

Skies that threatened rain early in the day held clear and the opening crowd at James O'Hara's course. The mile oval which was practically rebuilt since the spring promised to be muddy early in the morning, but dried and was good for the racing. Those who made the journey witnessed some keenly competitive sport as the Bedwells furnished the sharpest sort of a struggle from flag fall to finish.

The race marked the second victory of the month for Bulletin and brought $6,700 to the Bedwells. It was a lucky triumph as the running showed Celidon clearly the best.

Bulletin was well ridden by McCrossen. He sent the Atwell colt out with the early pace and saved ground on the backstretch but was blocked at the far turn and steadily fell out of contention. Ursa Major displayed good early foot and the other hopefuls showed nothing.

The combat purse, resulted in Harry Baker making a show of the opposition that he encountered when he was returned a handy victory. Never far off the fast pace that was cut out by Chink, he gained with a tremendous rush when three parts of the trip had been traversed and moved into the lead without being extended when Chink and Thistlewood raced to the outside part of the track. Chink after losing much ground held on long enough to gain the place award beating out Cudgeler a half length.

To the popular stable of Harry Payne Whitney goes the honor of winning the initial running of the W. M. Burch Memorial. Chink, who was blocked at the far turn and steadily fell out of contention. Ursa Major displayed good early foot and the other hopefuls showed nothing.

Abel, who is riding in great style at present, had the leg up on Backbone and turned in another keen exhibition. He kept the colt fairly well behaved and the other hopefuls sent him away quickly, following the pace of Gilder.

Making the turn for home, Backbone lugged for the rail and Abel drove him through to range alongside the fly. It required a brave drive of the legs and further hustling to save off Senator Norris, who came with a whirl on the outside.

The Senator led the gate a bit slowly, but went up steadily on the outside and finished in determined fashion through the crowd along the inner barrier, responsible for the wait at the barrier, broke running and set a brisk pace to the furlong pole. Then he tailed off steadily. Chink went along evenly the way and cut sharp figure in the running. Polly McGivigan flattered her admirers for three furlongs, reaching the fold up. Extra Dry had no chance after being practically left.

The Promenade purse, the first of the feature of the afternoon, brought out the smallest field of the entire card. The contest resulted in a clever win for Rancocas stable's Celidon. Seniors, who was installed as prohibitive favorite for the contest owing to four of the overnight starters declining.

From a fast start, Jim Crow, breaking from the inside position, scampered into the lead with Crystal Domino showing the way to the other two starters by several lengths. Reaching the turn for home Crystal Domino readily shook off Jim Crow, but it was here that Celidon came up and won by a head.

Rancocas came up and won by a head. The two-year-olds faced the issue for the inaugural number, a 6 1/2-furlong dash. A hotly fought contest came about with the running. The Bedwells part of the purse was snared by Pomonkey from the J. P. McGovern establishment in a tight race. Reaching the end of the race, his margin over Encamp was just a head while a like distance separated the third horse, Indian Light.

Fine Church Built By Race Horse Men

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 15 (By A. P.).—Race horse men of the Lexington, Ky., have erected a new church, the building of the Episcopal Church of the Good Shepherd, which was formally opened here yesterday. The Rt. Rev. Lewis W. Burton, bishop of the Lexington diocese, delivered the sermon at the opening of the church, which cost approximately $200,000.

In his sermon, Bishop Burton compared the horse men to the Centurion of Capernaum, whose slave was despondent ill, and for whose sake the elders of the Jewish church entreated Christ to heal the slave, saying, "He loveth our nation and himself built the synagogue."
